So - who can credibly account for these body fragments, other than their being the result of high explosives being detonated in the towers?

The following article proves, using the inviolate laws of physics, the falsity of the government's propaganda explanation for the building collapses:

SIMPLE PHYSICS EXPOSES THE BIG 9/11 LIE - GOVERNMENT BUILDING COLLAPSE EXPLANATION FAILS REALITY CHECK

On September 11, 2001, the world watched in horror as the World TradeCenter (WTC) Twin Towers collapsed, killing thousands of innocent people. Videos of the collapses were replayed ad nauseam on TV for days. About 5 hours after the towers fell, WTC building 7 also collapsed suddenly, completely, and straight down at near free-fall speed. This steel-framed building was not touched by the planes that struck the towers, and had sustained relatively minor debris damage and small fires. Nearby buildings far more heavily damaged remained standing.

In June 2005, in an apparent response to an article by Morgan Reynolds, former CIA Director and current Secretary of Defense Robert Gates stated, "The American people know what they saw with their own eyes on September11, 2001. To suggest any kind of government conspiracy in the events of that day goes beyond the pale."

We will prove here, with scientific rigor, that it's the government's tale that's "beyond the pale!"

Did most of the American people really understand the unprecedented phenomena they had witnessed? Could a lack of knowledge of physics, and the emotional shock of this mass-murderous "terrorist attack" have stymied objective thinking and led to the blind acceptance of authoritarian assertions?

The government and the media TOLD US what we saw. The government told us that we had witnessed a "gravitational" collapse; what is now referred to as a "pancake collapse". According to the government claims, the plane crashes and subsequent kerosene (like lamp oil - jet fuel is NOT exotic) fires heated the UL-certified structural steel to the point where it was significantly weakened, which is very difficult to believe, never mind repeat in an experiment. Even with massive fires that incinerate everything else, the steel frames of such buildings generally remain standing.

According to the "pancake theory", this purported (all physical evidence was quickly and illegally destroyed) weakening supposedly caused part of the tower to collapse downward onto the rest of the tower, which, we've been repeatedly told, somehow resulted in a chain reaction of the lower floors sequentially, one at a time, yielding to the weight falling from above.

There are some problems with that theory - it does not fit the observed facts

* It cannot account for the total failure of the immense vertical steelcore columns - as if they were there one moment and gone the next.

* The collapse times were near free-fall, far too rapid to be due to gravity alone. This article focuses on the latter of these two discrepancies.

Those that concocted the "pancake theory" made a fatal error - they didn't check their story against the inviolate laws of physics! This is easy to do, even without any physical evidence to examine. We can test that incredible pancake tale using basic high-school physics. Let's do that - use a simple, unassailable, incontrovertible conservation-of-energy analysis to perform a reality check that establishes once and for all that the government, and such government story backers as PBS, Popular Mechanics, and Scientific American have falsified the true nature of the 9/11 disaster.

How Gravity Acts:

Sir Isaac Newton noticed that apples fell from trees. Others had also noticed this, but none had ever devised a theory of gravity from the observation. Over the years, mankind has learned that the force ofgravity at and near Earth's surface produces an acceleration of known constant magnitude. That doesn't mean we know HOW it works, or WHY, but we have become able to predict its effects with a high degree of precision and certainty - gravity has always had the same, predictable, effect.

Galileo Galilei used the leaning tower of Pisa to demonstrate that a large ball and a small one (of lesser mass) fell (accelerated downward) at the same rate. Prior to Galileo, people had just assumed that heavier objects fall faster, much the way they had assumed the Earth was flat.

So while an object of greater mass will exert more force (its weight) upon anything supporting it against gravity's pull, it does not experience any greater acceleration when gravity's pull is not opposed - when it is falling. Earth's gravity at and near the surface of the planet can only accelerate objects downward at one known, constant rate: 32 feet persecond for each second of free fall. As Galileo demonstrated centuries ago, heavier objects are not accelerated any quicker than are lighter objects.

So Earth's gravity produces a downward acceleration of 32 feet per second per second. This means that an object, after falling one second, will be falling at a speed of 32 ft/sec. After the 2nd second, it will be falling at 64 ft/sec. After the 3rd second, it will be falling at 96 ft/sec., and so on.

Further, since gravity's acceleration is constant, and an object isfalling at 32 ft/sec after one second has elapsed, we know that it has averaged 16 ft/sec for the entire distance. Thus after one second, the object has fallen 16 feet.

Scientists have derived simple free-fall equations that can be used to harness this knowledge mathematically. These equations can be found inany

high-school physics book

* Falling velocity = acceleration of gravity x time. (V = G x T)
And
* Distance fallen = 1/2 x acceleration of gravity x time squared. (D =1/2 x G x T x T)

So if we want to know how far an object has free-fallen after 3 seconds

Distance = 1/2 x 32 x 9 = 144 feet

So after 3 seconds in Earth's gravity, an object will have fallen 144 feet and will be falling at 96 ft/sec.

Checking Our Work:

We've just solved a simple physics problem. Now let's check our work,using conservation of energy.

We know that energy can neither be created nor destroyed - it merely changes form. If we take the potential (in this case chemical, molecular) energyin a barrel of oil and burn it, it changes to heat energy. When we burn gasoline in our car's engine, we get kinetic (motional) energy, plus some heat, as an engine is not 100% efficient. When we use our car's brakes to bleed off some of that kinetic energy (slow down), that energy isconverted into heat (the brakes get hot). Explosives convert potential energy [molecular or atomic] to kinetic energy (explosive force) quickly enough to shatter or even pulverize concrete.

In the case of the free-falling object, the two kinds of energy we are concerned with are kinetic energy and potential energy. Examples of potential (gravitational) energy are the energy available from water stored up high in a water tower, or a boulder perched atop a hill. If whateveris holding it up there is removed, it will fall under the influence of gravity's pull. As it accelerates downward, the potential energy is converted to the kinetic energy of the object's motion.

So, as an object falls, it changes its potential energy into kinetic energy.

The equation for potential energy is
* Potential Energy = Mass (or weight) x Gravity x Height. (PE = M x G xH)

The equation for kinetic energy is
* Kinetic Energy = 1/2 x Mass x Velocity squared. (KE = 1/2 x M x V x V)

So let's just say, for the sake of simplicity, that our falling object hasa mass of 1. (Remember, the object's mass will affect its energy, and its momentum, but not its rate of free-fall.)

The potential energy given up by falling 3 seconds (144 ft) is: 1 x 32x144 = 4608

The kinetic energy gained after falling 3 seconds is 1/2 x 1 x 96 squared =1/2 x 9216 = 4608

So, the available potential energy was converted into kinetic energy.Seeing that energy was, in fact, conserved is how we know that the answer in the simple case above was correct. We've checked our work, using an independent analysis, based upon the sound physical principle of conservation of energy. Now, and only now, we can be certain that our answer was correct.

One Little Complication - the effect of air resistance

The free-fall equations above reflect a perfect, frictionless world. They perfectly predict the behavior of falling bodies in a vacuum. In fact, you may have seen a science class demonstration in which the air is pumped out of a tube and then a feather will fall, in that vacuum, just as fast as will a solid metal ball.

That's how parachutes work: much of the falling object's potential energy gets expended doing the work of pushing a lot of air out of the way inorder for the object to fall. As a result, not all of the gravitational potential energy can go towards accelerating the object downward at gravity's rate of 32 ft/sec/sec.

In other words, only when there is zero frictional resistance can any falling object's potential energy be completely converted into kinetic energy. Anything that resists a falling object's downward velocity reduces its acceleration from the maximum gravitational acceleration of 32 feet per second per second, as some of gravity's potential energy is consumed in overcoming frictional resistance.

This explains the phenomena of "terminal velocity". The free-fall equations predict that a falling object's velocity will continue to increase without limit. But in air, once a falling object reaches a certain speed, its propensity to fall will be matched by the air's resistance to the fall.At that point the object will continue to fall, but its speed will no longer increase over time. Another way of looking at it is this: gravity's incessant force produces a downward acceleration, but friction with theair creates an upward force and thus an upward acceleration. When falling at terminal velocity, the acceleration downward equals the accelerationupward, they cancel each other out, and a constant downward velocity ismaintained.

Thus the parachute, with its high air friction resistance, allows theperson attached to it to float to earth unharmed.

A Quick Recap:

Earth's gravity causes objects to fall, and they fall according to precise physical equations. The equations assume no air or other resistance. Any resistance at all will cause the object to fall less rapidly than it would without that resistance. If a falling object is affected by airresistance it falls slower than it would if free-falling, and it will take longer to fall a given distance.

Free-fall From WTC Building Heights

The towers were 1350 and 1360 feet tall; average = 1355 feet. Let's start by using our free-fall equation to see how long it should take an objectto free-fall from the towers' height.

Distance = 1/2 x Gravity x Time squared. (D = 1/2 x G x T x T)

With a little basic algebra, we solve the equation for the fall time,T:

2 x Distance = Gravity x Time(squared) (2 x D = G x T x T)
Time squared = (2 x Distance) / Gravity (T x T = 2 x D / G)
Time squared = 2 x 1355 / 32 = 84.7 (T = square root of (2 x D / G))
Time = 9.2

So our equation tells us that it takes 9.2 seconds to free-fall to the ground from the height of the WTC towers.

Using our simpler equation, V = G x T, we can see that at 9.2 seconds, the free-falling object's velocity must be about 295 ft/sec, which is justover 200 mph.

But that can only occur IN A VACUUM.

Since the WTC was in Earth's atmosphere at sea level, you might be able to imagine how much air resistance that represents. Think about putting your arm out the window of a car moving even half that fast! Most free-falling objects reach their terminal velocity long before they reach 200 mph. For example, the terminal velocity of a free-falling human body is around 120 mph. The terminal velocity of a free-falling cat is around 60 mph.

Therefore, it is clear that air resistance alone will make it take longer than 9.2 seconds for anything falling from the towers' height to reach the ground.

Observations from 9/11:

On page 305 of the 9/11 Commission Report, we are told, in the government's "complete and final report" on 9/11, that the South Tower collapsed in 10 seconds. Here is the exact quote

"At 9:58:59, the South Tower collapsed in ten seconds". That's the government's official number. With all the videos that show it, they could not lie about this.

But as we've determined above, the FREE-FALL TIME IN A VACUUM is 9.2 seconds, and 10 seconds is an exceptionally short fall time through the air.

This "collapse" was not without far more physical resistance than from the air alone. It proceeded through all the lower stories of the tower. Those undamaged floors below the plane impact zone offered resistance thousands of times greater than that of air. Those lower stories, and the central steel core columns, had successfully supported the mass of the tower for 30 years despite hurricane-force winds and tremors. Air cannot do that.

Can anyone possibly imagine undamaged lower floors getting out of the way of the upper floors as gracefully and relatively without friction as air would? Can anyone possibly imagine the lower stories slowing the fall of the upper floors less than would, say, a parachute?

It is beyond the scope of the simple but uncontested physics here to tell you how long such a collapse should have taken. Would it have taken a minute? Ten minutes? Hard to say, but certainly it would take far more than 10 seconds!

What is certain, beyond any shadow of a doubt, is that the towers could not have collapsed gravitationally, through their intact lower stories, as rapidly as was observed on 9/11. Not even close. This is shown above to be physically impossible!

Not only was tremendous energy expended in causing the observed massive high-speed sideways debris ejections, but virtually all the concrete and glass of the tower was pulverized - actually dissociated is a better word. Never mind what happened to all the supporting steel core columns! The energy requirements to do anything like that, alone, rival the total amount of potential energy that the entire tower had to give. Gravity alone is sufficient to cause some things to fall that far, even through air, in close to the observed 10 second collapse time. But that is without the huge expenditure of energy necessary to pulverize all of that concrete and glass, eject debris, plus cause the steel core columns to effectively disappear. The gravitational potential energy present was certainly not enough to have done all these things at once.

Energy can neither be created nor destroyed; it only changes form. So WHERE DID ALL THAT ADDITIONAL DESTRUCTIVE ENERGY COME FROM?

Conclusions

In order for the towers to have collapsed "gravitationally" in the observed duration, as we've been told over and over again, one or more of the following zany-sounding conditions must have been met

* The undamaged structure below the impact zone offered zero resistance to the collapse.
* The glass and concrete spontaneously disintegrated without any expenditure of energy.
* The massive vertical steel core columns simply vanished, as if by magic.
* On 9/11 alone, in that location alone, gravity was much stronger than gravity.
* On 9/11 alone, in that location alone, energy was not conserved.

None of these laws-of-physics-violating, and thus impossible, conditions can be accounted for by the official government theory of 9/11, nor by any of the subsequent analyses and arguments designed to prop up this official myth of 9/11.

The Bottom Line

The government explanations for the WTC collapses fail the most basic conservation-of-energy reality check. Therefore the government theory is FALSE; it does not fit the observed facts, and the notion of a "pancake collapse" cannot account for what happened. The "pancake collapse" explanation is impossible, and thus absurd. It is A LIE.

It is utterly impossible for a gravitational collapse to proceed so destructively through a path of such great resistance in anywhere near free-fall time. This fact debunks the preposterous contention that theWTC collapses can be blamed solely upon damage resulting from the plane impacts.

The unnaturally short durations of the top-down collapses reveal that the towers did not disintegrate because they were coming down, but rather they came down because something else was causing them to disintegrate.

So, to the extent that people accept the ridiculous "pancake collapse" story, former CIA Director and current Secretary of Defense Gates' other premise, that people know what they saw, is also false. It is left to you to decide if his conclusion, which was based upon clearly incorrect presumptions, is also flawed.

The collapse of WTC building 7, which was NOT hit by any plane, and which also collapsed within a second of free-fall time later that same day, similarly fails the conservation-of-energy analysis. The 9/11 Commission made no attempt to explain it.

Just how and why so many highly-accredited and credentialed people all so miserably failed to check the "pancake collapse" theory, by giving it this basic physics reality check, is beyond the scope of this analysis.

SO - WHO DONE IT??

Any good detective will tell you that the way to find criminals is to investigate those that benefitted, or stood to benefit, from the crime. Surely those that were quickly blamed for this mass-murderous crime of the century - Bin Laden, etc., had evil intentions against America, but could not have done it single-handedly. Just after 9/11 Iraq and Saddam Hussein were implied as guilty in a PSYOP to justify the invasion of Iraq, when in fact they were blameless for 9/11.

Here are some that, under the criteria of the good detective above, must be considered suspects:

Bush, Cheney, and their fellow Republican/neo-conservatives then in power.
Then NYC mayor Rudy Giuliani.
WTC owner/leaseholder Larry Silverstein.
The theocratic nation of Israel.

DEMAND that congress reopen the investigation and bring the real MASS-MURDERERS to justice!

NINE ELEVEN - NEVER AGAIN!

Actually, John is kinda correct for the first time in his life!
Just make a smart sales tax... not just a stupid flat tax.

Even RICH people have to spend their money on something stupid... and they DO!
They WANT to...they need to!

Rolex's, Rolls Royces, for instance. They are luxury IMPORTS! Tax the snot out of those like items!

But do NOT tax the "rich" just because they are wealthy.
Tax the POOR as well, when those morons buy silly crap, instead of a decent education.

If by insane you mean, "Calling you to be able to prove anything about your claims", then I suppose I am.

Though I have to say if you consider it an act of insanity to require proof from you, then clearly proof of your claims is something you simply don't have.

It shows your claim was FALSE, utterly false, yet you repeat the same assertion.

However, so far we can't have it fall down, and it can't fall sideways as those are the direction of "controlled demolition", so which way is "natural"?

Up?

We know as the photographic evidence shows, It did NOT fall in it's own footprint, yet you continue to assert that it did, even when you know that it didn't.

So much any faith that you follow the facts.

A very stupid idea. This one also apears to have small bipartisan sponsorship...from the Senate website:

"Mr. LEAHY (for himself, Mr. HATCH, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. SCHUMER, Mrs.
FEINSTEIN, Mr. WHITEHOUSE, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. KOHL, Mr. COONS, and Mr. BLUMENTHAL) introduced the following bill..."

This one deserves to collapse.

Are you interested in collecting enough money to run the legitimate functions of government, or in taking money from people you don't like?

So, let's examine the propaganda, shall we?

These "huge companies" you speak of are public -- meaning that they are owned by the stockholders. So, these "profits" are really the profits of the share holder -- of which they are /taxed/.

What is this mystery money that you want to tax?

All your photo shows is a leaning top so maybe the next blast countered that lean and made the builing straighten up before hitting the ground.How can you assume it didnot collapse in its own footprints,you must show every frame till the fall has stopped to say that. Scot you are very easily caught in your lies and half truths!

So why did the leaning top not pull the whole building that way it would have been easily stood back up and dusted off and back in bidnez
in no time! You are almost as stupid as george!

Scot you did not address the missile attack at the Pentagram that NIST deliberately omited from their report.You did not mention NIST claimed American Alinerliner hit the Pentagram when there is still no evidence it ever existed. You did not explain that the Passengers list NIST reported has live people on it today. You did not address why half the said Terrorist are still alive!

If you cant proove these NIST lies to be true how can you believe their first report at all?

NIST changed their name from the Bureau of Standards after the first flouride lawsuits were filed.They were a Government Agengy given the yask to allow flouride put in your drinking water.It was a Madd NAZI Scientific expieriment to control the minds of the US citizens,one of Hitlers old brainwashing techniques.

They lied back then,then they were called upon again to form the WARREN commision named after Col Warrens report that flouride prevents tooth decay!

And they announced JFK was killed by a lone assasin one Lee Harvey Oswald and their was no evidence connecting the government to his killing.To day we have pinned the tail on the donkey showing it was a government conspiracy and one CIA agent DAVID FERRY delt the killing shotThat was their second GOVERNMENT financed lie.

Now they were sactioned again for a Government cover up and they again lied saying the United States Government was also not connected to this CIA plot!

Thats 3 strikes Scott.

The game is over,it is time to play the fake allien invasion to take the multitudes mind off their Governments evil!

Even then I would want to hear what he considers to be the "legitimate functions of government" because a lot of it sounds like "take from the rich and give to the poor".

What's inside the Fumbling Bumbling Idiot's vehicle trackers?
http://www.wnd.com
http://www.worldnetdaily.com

If I find any Sheet like that on my vehicle, It Belongs To ME! I would lay it on a big piece of iron in my back yard and I would Beat the Hell out of it with my Sledgehammer.

Those MOFOs wants to track me? Let em! Tomorrow I am going to the Goodwill store at 12 Oak Park Circle, (Map App those places with your smartphone/touch tablet/whatever if you want to) from the Goodwill store I am going to the Lowe's store, corner of Greenway Drive and Highway 18, from the Lowe's store I am going directly to the Dangerous Walmart store at the intersection of Greenway Drive and Highway 18.From there, I am coming straight back home to doggy's couch.

Howsomever, I Hope those Stupid Ass Fumbling Bumbling Idiots (FBI) DO plant a tracker gizmo on my vehicle, it will be FUN busting it into a Million Pieces!

Yes, he would have been. Immaterial of course since he's the FIRST and ONLY president in our history ever to release his birth certificate and prove he was born on US soil.

THIS:
" Now that the certificate has been released, the pattern by the Tribune and other media continues, "quickly now, let's move along, nothing to see here." The White House says that's the real deal so okay, that settles it.

Let's not ask some basic questions such as how a photocopy of a 1961 document could look so pristine. There are already experts, including one in Grand Junction saying the document has been altered. Another expert, Ivan Zatkovich has said "There was an explicit action by a person to modify the document." Zatkovich has over 28 years of experince in computer science and document management. For the past 10 years he has been used as an expert witness in federal court for civil and criminal proceedings.

We do believe these questions should be looked into. This is why if Obama truly wished to put the issue behind him he would submit his original copy to a forensic test.

If Woodward and Bernstein had followed the lead of today's journalists, Nixon would have never been forced from office in disgrace. They did what journalists are supposed to do, question and investigate. Not simply blindly accept whatever our leaders tell us."

>> No, he would not have been. The Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952 specified who would be a citizen if born abroad. If only one parent was a citizen, then that citizen needed to have been physically present in the USA for five years after the age of 14. As Obama's mother was only 18 at the time of his birth, she did not meet the requirement due to simple arithmetic. That provision applied regardless of the marital status of the parents. If the parents were not married, an additional restriction applied: the father had to "legitimate" the child by acknowledging and establishing paternity.

The applicability of Title III, Section 301 (a)(7) does not depend in any way on the marital status of the parents: that one citizen parent must have been physically present in the USA for 10 years, five of which were after the age of 14, in order for the child born abroad to be a citizen at birth. Nothing in the statute mentions the marital status of the parents, and there is no implicit reference to marital status. The marital status was irrelevant.

Wrong. Had he been born outside the US, he would not have been born a citizen under the law in effect.

I have a QSL letter (verie, for those in Glendale) for reception on 19 March 1990 on 3325.

That for a report in Indonesian.

requirement of the one citizen parent. The applicability of Title III, Section 301 (a)(7) does not depend in any way on the marital status of the parents: that one citizen parent must have been physically present in the USA for 10 years, five of which were after the age of 14, in order for the child born abroad to be a citizen at birth. Nothing in the statute mentions the marital status of the parents, and there is no implicit reference to marital status. The marital status was irrelevant.

I am plagiarizing this (I don't remember every word he said, but this is the gist of it) from what Paul Gallo said a few minutes ago on his Super Talk Mississippi radio talk show.

He said a 4 way Stop sign is like democracy.democrats figure it is all about them, why should they care about laws? If a democrat thinks nobody is looking, that democrat will run through that Stop sign without stopping.
Paul Gallo is Right.
http://www.supertalk.fm
I see democrats all the time around here (most of them don't care if anybody is looking, or not) running Stop signs and traffic lights/red lights.

I am a Conservative and I am a Christian and I always Stop.

Since we were all assured things would happen around the world on May 21, here it is 30 mins to May 21 and my "Thank God
Its the Apocalypse" party is -- to put it frankly -- a little quiet.

Maybe it's because there haven't been any decent earthquakes for 24 hrs (we were planning to boo every quake as they were registered at the USGS website under a mag 9; but nothing has popped up for quite a few hours). Or maybe it's just that "20 minutes after the hour" thing. ;)

No, he would not have been. The law has been cited and you're wrong.
His mother was not old enough - she had not been physically present in the USA for five years after the age of 14 at the time of his birth.

What's the matter, racist? Can't find your Klan robes?

At some point you would think that the above scum encrusted racist would just make his point, he doesn't like African-Americans and knows they are dumber than he.

Hmm.....the above poster never attended Harvard Law.

Obama did.

The above poster never became a senator.

Obama did.

The above poster never became president.

Obama did.

The above poster never won a Nobel Prize.

Obama did.

The above poster never published two books that earned millions.

Obama did.

And that makes who the better, smarter person?

I did and it appeared to me it did not fall over just fell down.Had it have fell over it would have had the top land 1200 feet from its base in the same direction of fall.This was not evident it fell straight down according to NIST because none of its pieces were found 1200 feet from its base.

World Trade Center Plaza was its footprint,funny how nothing that was not insurred by Larry Silverstien got damaged.

Limprod your desire to become a man will require an operation like Chasity Bono got.Look how happy IT is after having a penis attached.If you are scared to have one put on try the tongue rasping done it will make your girl friends feel like they are being ravished by a cat.

It is scientifically and logically impossible to prove that there is no God. One of the primary tenets of logic, regardless of the topic, is that the null hypothesis cannot be proven. The full burden of proof rests on those who make the extraordinary claim to begin with.
Arguing about "trying to prove the existence or nonexistence of God" is a waste of time for people who are unfamiliar with either science or logic.

It is purely a matter of faith, and throwing around DNA arguments like these above is just unscientific nonsense.

Sorry, I just don't give a damn. Not just several relay sites and hours, but many langauges as well.
From our NAm perspective, probably not a big deal, since the Kigali transmitter will remain operational, with English, and it is well-heard on this side of the pond - but S & SE Asia will really miss the Trincomalee language broadcasts. Several Indian and Sri Lankan friends have expressed dismay.

The United States was created as a democratic republic. We elect public servants who then act in the directions we direct them to ...

The people are doing their part, the public servants are serving money and power in a shadow government while turning a deaf ear on the demands of the people ...

- this word is not in these documents directly, but ï¿½We the peopleï¿½ and ï¿½Republican Form of Governmentï¿½ are - most people say our form of government is a ï¿½Federal Democratic Republicï¿½

They "say that" because that fits the description! READ IT!

It's obvious you kooks keep doing it, but what's not obvious is why you're so obsessed with gay stuff, and how exactly you loons keep from being locked up in a secured mental health facility.

Again, you show that you are a retard from the UK, or someplace even more retarded.
The United States is a CONSTITUTIONAL REPUBLIC!

ï¿½Unfit For Command: /Swift Boat/ Veterans Speak Out Against John Kerryï¿½
-- Jerome Corsi

The above book brought the truth out about John Kerry, a stunning work of detective work and developing the truth while so many attempted the cover up ...

His, just released, book, "Where's the Birth Certificate?: The Case that Barack Obama is not Eligible to be President" -- by Jerome Corsi, is just as valid and hard hitting with facts and proofs of the crimes in progress by barack obama (AKA barry soetoro) and his henchmen.

You? A nutjob with personal opinions and personal attacks on those who point out facts ... sad, so very, very sad ...

This afternoon at the EZ Pawn shop I saw a little Uniden hand held scanner for sale for $57.00.The label the pawn shop stuck on there said, June 21, $47.00.Is it worth that money? assuming it works OK? It says NASCAR (I reckon the factory put the NASCAR logo on the scanner) on the front of the scanner just below the digital readout panel.I will wait untill June 21 if I decide to go back and check it out.

That's what we are doing now. Sending jobs overseas, and sending our military around the world to protect other people, particularly those with oil. It's not the way I'd do it.

Wanting a large healthy tax-paying middle class is screaming at the people to make sacrifices for us?

What do you prefer instead?

Well, you could look at the video from which I took this frame, which shows that it didn't "magically" straighten back up, or you could look at the debris field which extended quite a extensive distance from the "footprint" that the building clearly didn't fall into.

Why do you continue to assume and assert that it did when we have photographic PROOF that it didn't?

Well, you could look at the video, which shows it fell in the manner shown (ie well outside of it's "footprint") but that would require someone who would actually look at the known facts and evidence. Except Joe is suppose to be such an "expert" since he claims to know ALL about 9/11 and how it REALLY occurred. Seems to me as if at this point Joe is all but admitting he doesn't even know the basic facts considering what is known to have occurred and as such one would have to question his knowledge into the realm of knowing all the other things he asserts to know.

Please define exactly what you mean by "Common Good"?

Taking what I have to give it to someone else?
To build a road that all can use?
To build a road that only some can use?

Explain to me exactly what is and isn't the "Common Good"?

Yeah, it collapsed into its' own footprint, completely filling the ~7 basement levels with debris, and they was forced to over flow the rest of the material of the controlled demolitions, EXACTLY!

Sounds exactly like the pictures I am viewing! Good job, you found the evidence of the controlled demolitions -- I knew you would, if you looked hard enough!

Since we were all assured things would happen around the world
on May 21, here it is 30 mins to May 21 and my "Thank God
Its the Apocalypse" party is -- to put it frankly -- a little quiet.

Maybe it's because there haven't been any decent earthquakes for
at the USGS website under a mag 9; but nothing has popped up for quite a few hours). Or maybe it's just that "20 minutes after the hour" thing. ;)

The way that he says it, it's supposed to start at the international date line at 6PM local time, and work it's way around the world from there, hitting each time zone at 6PM local time. If so, we have about 11 hours, 21 minutes left here in the ROK. I'm not cancelling my plans for Monday.

And so John proves that even with photographic proof showing it didn't land in it's own footprint that he will continue to assert something which he knows to be a lie......

Yet, you're suppose to believe him because he says he's telling you what "really" happened..

So tell me John, how exactly did the massive section of building shown falling out of it's footprint "magically" get forced to fall the other way?

Did Captain Kirk fly in with his cloaked vessel and use a tractor beam on it?

Please explain why in the video you can WATCH the building fall outside it's footprint, and why we are suppose to ignore documented PROOF and instead accept your unsupported assertions?

The bushkultie doesn't know the difference, either:

"UPS and Computers

The letters stand for ï¿½uninterruptible power supplyï¿½ ï¿½ batteries ï¿½ not United Postal Serviceï¿½ which NIST actually confused ï¿½ and confuses! See this letter from NIST to the Enrico Manieri:"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

That's quite an error, too.

Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

It's a study in treachery.

They're all too weak to compete honestly/fairly.

The Bush crime family of treacherous wimps has never been on the same side as the USA.

ObL couldn't affect the USA's air defense system.

Cheney did.

""The U.S. government has consistently blamed me for being behind every occasion its enemies attack it.

"I would like to assure the world that I did not plan the recent attacks, which seems to have been planned by people for personal reasons," bin Laden's statement said."

Yes, the bushkultie is so stupid as to believe faked videos and disregard direct statements to authentic news organizations.

Can't expect a bushkultie to understand geometry, either:

"the angle was nearly perpendicular, between zero and four degrees.
Somehow, NIST and their associates missed by ten full degrees"

http://911conspiracy.wordpress.com/2010/07/11/nist-ara-error-speaks-volumes/

Notice that the bushkultie must ignore this fact, too.

Of course you hate America when you insist that those who murder Americans should not be prosecuted

You always do.

The bushkultie doesn't believe in actual admissible evidence.

The bushworshipper is so uncivilized as to prefer assassinations to trials.

It's not difficult to fool a bushkultie.

The bushworshipper has been tricked repeatedly.

The bushkultie is pitied, while a useful example.

The bushkultie is a mere dupe.

The bushworshipper was fooled easily by faked videos.

Others could see the discrepancies quite clearly.

The real perps were 'incompetent' all the way to their

The claim of "incompetence" is ludicrous.

"If a group of people made a public statement saying that having a new Pearl Harbor would be the only way the public would support their agenda, and these same people were in positions that would allow them to conduct, permit or enable such an event when that event actually took place...would they deserve your suspicion? Well this is EXACTLY what happened. The very people with established motives for conducting an event like the one that took place on 9/11/2001 were responsible for national security when we had that most unlikely, unrealistic and implausible complete catastrophic failure of every single defense procedure in operation."

The Japanese weren't permitted to surrender when they were ready to do so.

That was in order to intimidate the Soviets via the gratuitous use of the bomb.

It helps to understand the real situation, including that of Pearl Harbor.

The US goaded Japan into attacking, and then let the attack occur despite warnings of it, indeed even made itself more vulnerable to that attack than it should have. The US government at that time wanted to gain public support for war, and 'improve trade' in the east. They accomplished that, but threw in the added threat to everybody else by escalating to the use of nuclear bombs on civilians, when many who knew a great deal about the situation considered that excessive.

"The duty officer at U.S. Asiatic Fleet headquarters in Manila first received word of the Pearl Harbor attack at 0230 on 8 December 1941, but a full hour passed before Brig. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, MacArthur's chief of staff, heard the news from commercial broadcasts. He immediately notified MacArthur and all commanders that a state of war now existed with Japan. MacArthur ordered his troops to battle stations.

Despite this warning, when the Japanese pilots of the 11th Air Fleet attacked Clark Field nine hours later, they caught two squadrons of B-17s lined up on the field and a number of American fighters just preparing to take off. The first wave of twenty-seven Japanese twin-engine bombers achieved complete tactical surprise and destroyed most of the American heavy bombers. A second bomber strike followed while Zero fighters strafed the field. Only three P-40s managed to take off. A simultaneous attack on Iba Field in northwest Luzon was also successful: all but two of the 3d Squadron's P-40s were destroyed. The Far East Air Force lost fully half its planes the first day of the war. ..."

Were you unaware that Japan was provoked into that attack? The US froze Japanese assets (treaty violation) and embargoed their oil. Roosevelt was tired of supplying only materials to the war, and he saw Japan as the easiest way in, via an attack on US soil.

Why did Roosevelt order the pacific fleet to relocate from the west coast to Hawaii in the summer of 1940? Why was the commander, Admiral Richardson, removed after complaining that Pearl Harbor didn't offer sufficient air or topedo defense?

Didn't Roosevelt receive a memo in the fall of 1940, from a Navy analyst, describing eight ways to force Japan to attack the US (one of them an oil embargo), and all of them eventually implemented? Didn't Roosevelt's advisor Ickes tell him that an oil embargo would be an "easy" way to get into the war, the day after Hitler attacked Russia in the summer of 1941?

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted to enter the war in Europe, especially after the fall of France (June 1940). In this desire he was supported by the old elite ... After meeting FDR at the Atlantic Conference (August 14, 1941) Churchill noted the "astonishing depth of Roosevelt's intense desire for war." But there was a problem: the President could not overcome the resistance to "Europe's war" felt by most Americans and their elected representatives.

The mood of the country was a problem, and Roosevelt therefore resorted to subterfuge. He systematically and deliberately provoked the Japanese into attacking the United States. His real target was Hitler: Roosevelt expected the German dictator to abide by the Tripartite Pact and declare war on America, and hoped that Hitler's decision would be facilitated by a display of America's apparent vulnerability. Accordingly, even though Roosevelt was well aware of the impending attack on Pearl Harbor ..."

The US Army Signal Intelligence Service had cracked the Japanese codes before December of 1941. Although a British obsession with secrecy allowed the US to claim it had first deciphered JN25, it was actually done first by the British and Australians.

"The "true heroes" of the Allied codebreaking effort, Smith says, were Eric Nave, an Australian officer attached to the Royal Navy, and John Tiltman, a British cryptographer. Although the Americans claimed that they broke JN25, the Japanese navy's operational code which contributed to the destruction of the Japanese carrier fleet at Midway, it was the work of Tiltman -- only a few weeks after it came into use in 1939."

http://www.fpp.co.uk/online/00/09/Codebreaking2.html

"In 1979 the NSA released 2,413 JN-25 orders of the 26,581 intercepted by US between Sept 1 and Dec 4, 1941. The NSA says "We know now that they contained important details concerning the existence, organization, objective, and even the whereabouts of the

Pearl Harbor Strike Force." (Parker p 21) Of the over thousand radio messages sent by Tokyo to the attack fleet, only 20 are in the National Archives. All messages to the attack fleet were sent several times, at least one message was sent every odd hour of the day and each had a special serial number. Starting in early November 1941 when the attack fleet assembled and started receiving radio messages, OP-20-G stayed open 24 hours a day and the "First Team" of codebreakers worked on JN-25. In November and early December 1941, OP-20-G spent 85 percent of its effort reading Japanese Navy traffic, 12 percent on Japanese diplomatic traffic and 3 percent on German naval codes. FDR was personally briefed twice a day on JN-25 traffic by his aide, Captain John Beardell, and demanded to see the original raw messages in English. The US Government refuses to identify or declassify any pre-Dec 7, 1941 decrypts of JN-25 on the basis of national security, a half-century after the war."

Many people disagreed with the nuclear bombings of Japan:

"...in [July] 1945... Secretary of War Stimson, visiting my headquarters in Germany, informed me that our government was preparing to drop an atomic bomb on Japan. I was one of those who felt that there were a number of cogent reasons to question the wisdom of such an act. ...the Secretary, upon giving me the news of the successful bomb test in New Mexico, and of the plan for using it, asked for my reaction, apparently expecting a vigorous assent.

"During his recitation of the relevant facts, I had been conscious of a feeling of depression and so I voiced to him my grave misgivings, first on the basis of my belief that Japan was already defeated and that dropping the bomb was completely unnecessary, and secondly because I thought that our country should avoid shocking world opinion by the use of a weapon whose employment was, I thought, no longer mandatory as a measure to save American lives. It was my belief that Japan was, at that very moment, seeking some way to surrender with a minimum loss of 'face'. The Secretary was deeply perturbed by my attitude..." - Dwight Eisenhower, Mandate For Change, pg. 380

In a Newsweek interview, Eisenhower again recalled the meeting with Stimson:

"...the Japanese were ready to surrender and it wasn't necessary to hit them with that awful thing."
- Ike on Ike, Newsweek, 11/11/63

(Chief of Staff to Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman)
"It is my opinion that the use of this barbarous weapon at Hiroshima and Nagasaki was of no material assistance in our war against Japan. The Japanese were already defeated and ready to surrender because of the effective sea blockade and the successful bombing with conventional weapons.

"The lethal possibilities of atomic warfare in the future are frightening. My own feeling was that in being the first to use it, we had adopted an ethical standard common to the barbarians of the Dark Ages. I was not taught to make war in that fashion, and wars cannot be won by destroying women and children." - William Leahy, I Was There, pg. 441.

On August 8, 1945, after the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, Hoover wrote to Army and Navy Journal publisher Colonel John Callan O'Laughlin, "The use of the atomic bomb, with its

quoted from Gar Alperovitz, The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb, pg. 635.

MacArthur biographer William Manchester has described MacArthur's reaction to the issuance by the Allies of the Potsdam Proclamation to Japan: "...the Potsdam declaration in July, demand[ed] that Japan surrender unconditionally or face 'prompt and utter destruction.' MacArthur was appalled. He knew that the Japanese would never renounce their emperor, and that without him an orderly transition to peace would be impossible anyhow, because his people would never submit to Allied occupation unless he ordered it. Ironically, when the surrender did come, it was conditional, and the condition was a continuation of the imperial reign. Had the General's advice been followed, the resort to atomic weapons at Hiroshima and Nagasaki might have been unnecessary." William Manchester, American Caesar: Douglas MacArthur 1880-1964, pg. 512.

Norman Cousins was a consultant to General MacArthur during the American occupation of Japan. Cousins writes of his conversations with MacArthur, "MacArthur's views about the decision to drop the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki were starkly different from what the general public supposed." He continues,
"When I asked General MacArthur about the decision to drop the bomb, I was surprised to learn he had not even been consulted. What, I asked, would his advice have been? He replied that he saw no military justification for the dropping of the bomb. The war might have ended weeks earlier, he said, if the United States had agreed, as it later did anyway, to the retention of the institution of the emperor."
Norman Cousins, The Pathology of Power, pg. 65, 70-71.

A panel set up by President Truman to study the Pacific war issued a report, the United States Strategic Bombing Survey, in July 1946, which declared,
"Based on a detailed investigation of all the facts, and supported by the testimony of the surviving Japanese leaders involved, it is the Survey's opinion that certainly prior to 31 December 1945, Japan would have surrendered even if atomic bombs had not been dropped, even if Russia had not entered the war, and even if no invasion had been planned or contemplated."

By 1945, Japan's entire military and industrial machine was grinding to a halt as the resources needed to wage war were all but eradicated. The navy and air force had been destroyed ship by ship, plane by plane, with no possibility of replacement. When, in the spring of 1945, the island nation's lifeline to oil was severed, the war was over except for the fighting. By June, Gen. Curtis LeMay, in charge of the air attacks, was complaining that after months of terrible firebombing, there was nothing left of Japanese cities for his bombers but "garbage can targets". By July, U.S. planes could fly over Japan without resistance and bomb as much and as long as they pleased. Japan could no longer defend itself.{6} After the war, the world learned what U.S. leaders had known by early 1945: Japan was militarily defeated long before Hiroshima. It had been trying for months, if not for years, to surrender; and the U.S. had consistently rebuffed these overtures. A May 5 cable, intercepted and decoded by the U.S., dispelled any possible doubt that the Japanese were eager to sue for peace. Sent to Berlin by the German ambassador in Tokyo, after he talked to a ranking Japanese naval officer, it read:

Since the situation is clearly recognized to be hopeless, large sections of the Japanese armed forces would not regard with disfavor an American request for capitulation even if the terms were hard...

As far as is known, Washington did nothing to pursue this opening. Later that month, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson almost capriciously dismissed three separate high-level recommendations from within the Roosevelt administration to activate peace negotiations. The proposals advocated signaling Japan that the U.S. was willing to consider the all-important retention of the emperor system; i.e., the U.S. would not insist upon "unconditional surrender"...

According to Manhattan Project scientist Leo Szilard, Secretary of State Byrnes had said that the bomb's biggest benefit was not its effect on Japan but its power to "make Russia more manageable in Europe"...

Of course, this was also the time in history when Prescott Bush, grandfather of the POTUS, was making a fortune in banking for the Nazis.

The truth is that the Bush regime deals terror. Wasn't the first Bush president involved in Iraqgate and Iran-Contra?

Anyone recall that the guy who shot Reagan was a Bush family friend?

Will anyone complain when anything branded a 'conspiracy theory' by the Bushites leads to arrests and asset forfeitures, without due process, of United States citizens?

The Bush regime benefits directly and substantially from that [9/11] attack, via entities such as the Carlyle Group.

'Born-again' Bush called it a 'crusade' against 'Islam', a 'war' against 'terrorism', as he let the postal workers die of anthrax.

Then why the hysteria against 'Islam' and not against 'Christianity' for the likes of the abortion-clinic bombers and the KKK?

Isn't ['Dubya'] the one who approves of groups associated with the KKK?

So US war machine propaganda means that the US military is terrorist. That's no surprise to folks in Nicaragua, and so many other places with similar histories ...

If only a true superpower would just win over populations by letting them farm their farms and work their trades and build schools and hospitals and medicine factories and roads, instead of destroying helpless innocent people in droves until there is no one with the strength left to complain.

The illegal invasion of Iraq is also a war crime of massive proportions.

Among the things shared by Corsi is that obama is a bastard, now, of course, we all already knew that, but he is a BASTARD in the real and true meaning of the word! Ann was NEVER married to obamas' father (claimed father, anyway.)

The interview with Corsi begins at ~1:30:00 into the file. VLC player can play the file, or the link, if you need a player for windows.

When enough Americans have read the book, " Where's the /Birth Certificate/?: The Case that Barack /Obama/ is not Eligible to be President" the end of the obama presidency is at an end, just as sure as John Kerry was "Swift Boated" by his lies and Corsis' book on him ...

These are historic times. You are witnessing the first fraudulent president to ever sit the public servant office. This is BIGGER than nixons' water gate, bigger the georges' WMDs, and is a crime of the magnitude of the 9/11 WTC controlled demolition of criminal factions in our government.

This will live in in infamy, in history, forever! And, you were there!

You simply need avail yourself of the experts. All I do is repeat the facts, evidence and proof of the experts. If you want to contest it, you had best take that up with the people making the claims, presenting the evidence and giving their expert observations and analysis.

Again, you want to attack the messenger instead of the message. Stop making a moron of yourself and start showing the experts their errors,

The Time Period from 0550 to 0610 UTC seems to be the best for an ID; as they seem to give both the English "Radio Truth" ID and the Spanish "Radio Verdad" ID several times each during that time period. ~ RHF

No.

But it is about paying for roads, sewer plants, water supplies, courts, prisons, government public servants, state parks, federal parks, the military, the coast guard, the border patrol, etc.

I say, those with the money have to pay the bills ... unfortunately, those with the money want to mortgage my future and the future of my children and their childrens' children to pay for it ... WE HAVE A PROBLEM!

Those who own the resources, wealth, land, oil, gold, etc. are going to have to pay the bills, I know. I am paying mine and a share of for those who can't ... plus, HAVING A SHITLOAD STOLEN BY THE GOVERNMENT, BANKSTERS, WALL STREET, ELITE, POWERFUL, ETC.

Harold Camping has been wrong before and he will in all likelyhood be wrong
yet again

Perhaps he should remmember the admonition of Matthew 24:36

"But of that day and hour knoweth no [man], no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only." Matthew 24:36
King James Bible

He claims to be a man of faith and a believer in the word of God yet he fails to heed these words.

EVERYTHING they CAN afford to purchase has hidden taxes in the price, we have been over that. To say they don't pay taxes is absurd!

I for one, would remove all the taxes from the poors' purchases, the transportation taxes in the shipping, the farmers taxes in the products, the government fees, fines, taxes, licenses, etc. It would not be hard, with resouorces and information of government, to figure these out, and take them off the cost of the poors' purchases -- probably bring the cost of a $3 loaf of bread down to about .25 cents! ... what is the sense of taxing them and making ME PAY FOR IT??? DUH!

In the end, I am being taxed. And, those who have been lucky and fortunate enough to be able to pay our own ways in life -- and I, for one, am getting pretty fed up with it!

OK, let's say we do that. Does that invalidate in any way my Uniden made HUNDREDS of scanners.

a) Get the specific model number.

b) Go to eBay, look up Uniden Model XYZ in the "Completed Auctions" section.

This will answer your question as to worth.

Nice to hear you admit you have a problem with ignorance and that you need to do something about it, but really you shouldn't be talking to yourself in public, makes people question your sanity even further.

> facts, evidence and proof of the experts.

So let's see, by your own admission you are a parrot that is so ignorant that he can't look at a photo of a building in the process of falling outside of it's footprint and still can't determine his experts might not be the experts they claim and that you're stupid enough to buy their Bullshit hook, line and sinker.

Ok, I accept you don't know what you're talking about by your own admission.

Which means you're really not the right person to be trying to talk about this stuff then are you?

Maybe you should tell your experts to come here since maybe they might actually know what they're talking about rather than simply mouthing the claims of others that they don't understand, can't support, and can't even recognize as being clearly wrong?

So now that we've established you as an ignorant mouthpiece by your own admission, is there any further reason anyone should listen to you for even a second?

IOW, "made up" taxation.

Didn't say they didn't. Simply said they were exempt to most.

Clearly is the objective was what you suggested then there would be NO exceptions. Since there are, then clearly your assertion is false or incomplete since it fails to account for all of the facts.

It doesn't take much thought to go straight to the heart of the matter here, if you want more taxes, tax those with more/most money ... I would suspect the most healthy end up making the most money for the longest lengths of time ... but, frequently, I have had "intuitive guessing" come up wrong ... due to my lack of research, I would postpone any final answers here ...

Do you Tote a Los Angeles Gold Card?
I read about it at http://www.drudgereport.com

Some of the food stores around here used to offer a Gold Card.It was suppose to let the customers save a little bit of money on food purchases.It was a damn racket though.I have never Toted a Gold Card before.

Yeah, that sounds about right. I have about a dozen of the things here, base and hand-held, except for one, they all came from flea markets, yard sales, second hand stores ... I have never paid more the 10 bucks for one, with the exception of the one I bought for about 100 bucks.

I tired of police, fire, ambulance, sewer plant, public parks, air port, etc. very quickly ... I will get the wife to sell them at here yard sale this summer ... probably just keep the one I paid a lot for ...

No, the politicians wish to mortgage your future and that of your children to fund short term political gains to justify their position and/or

Why? No matter who has the money, just tax the ones with it! If it is the middle class, they pay, if it is the rich class, they pay, if the poor suddenly become rich, THEY PAY! Like always, just follow the money ...

Why? What would make their money any better than stealing, err--I mean taxing, a billionaire on his death bed? Or, the ones getting an inheritance from him/her/it?

Get real, money is money -- no matter who you get it from ...

Where are they? They live next door to you?

Funny, my neighborhood, my city, my county, hell, my whole state seems absent of them!

Is main scream news making this all up by publishing the rantings of one lunatic and claiming "all his followers?"

I mean, sure looks that way to me!

How about hearing from some real people that are living in the midst of all these kooks so we know where they are located?

I'd fly or drive to where they are to give 'em a good look over! They are something I would have to see with my own eyes to believe!

IOW, made up taxation, since this taxation isn't directed at the poor.

That such taxation gets passed along the the consumer as a cost doesn't alter the fact that the consumer isn't who is taxed even though they end up in the end paying for it.

No, it's a fee. You don't go to the park you don't have to pay the fee. You don't stay in the camp ground then you don't pay that usage fee.

Tell me, if you went to Walt Disney Land and they made you pay to get in, is that a tax?

If you want a pizza and the restaurant makes you pay for it, is that a tax?

If the tax throws him into poverty rate by him not negotiating a high enough wage for his needs, expenses and responsibilities, or he has extended responsibilities such as parents he has to help, or a wife and children, etc., naturally, he would be tax exempt.

Why tax someone and give the money to the government, then have to turn around and give them money so they have shelter, clothing, food, etc.?

I believe I mentioned that in a previous post -- but, if not, it would seem to me that logic would immediately make that apparent to anyone of average intelligence.

And, brings us back to the original concept, FULL CIRCLE -- FOLLOW THE MONEY AND TAX THOSE WITH THE MONEY!

However, the whole point is to bring everyone out of poverty, have a high standard of living, safe neighborhoods, good schools, etc.

And, the same logic is always, and will remain, in effect -- you can't get blood out of a turnip ...

JS

Scot is completely ignoring the missile attack on the pentagram.Which way did it fall Scot after the missiles hit it?Three missiles are were recorded in the same FBI release,Well the remnates of the first one is just the solid rocket fuel plume after the hit,but you can see the next two in motion!

No, he would not have been. The law has been cited and you're wrong.
His mother was not old enough - she had not been physically present in the USA for five years after the age of 14 at the time of his birth.
Those who would have been citizens at birth are identified in the law.
Hussein did not qualify, due to the age and residency of his Maoist mother.

Sorry - you have nothing.

What John still doesn't realize is that he's just admitted to being a "know nothing". By his own admission he simply repeats what others say, and based on the evidence has no clue whether what he's repeating is good, bad or total bullshit, and he seems to like it that way.

But as long as some self proclaimed "expert" says it, and it's part of the conspiracy theory, then John is all over it like a cheap hooker.

Really?

I think of them as sheeple, demoncraps. They strive to be politically correct. Since their minds are empty, they are free to be filled with what their leaders tell them to believe, what to want, what is proper, how to behave ...

I guess it beats no life at all, no will at all, no thoughts of your own
... you can live life though others commands!

Gee, how unique!

His mother, obamas', was a slut-whore who spent time hanging out in bill letters (sp?) bar on Hotel Street in Honolulu, Hawaii. I doubt if anything controlled her, other than a stupid plan for obama sr. to be king of Kenya, and she his queen -- one weird bitch!

Guess this explains a lot about obama, and his amazing readiness to be a whore for the shadow government -- he is living testimony that the sins of the father, and mother, are imposed upon the child.

A close study sickens one ...

ZCZC AP20
QST de W1AW
Propagation Forecast Bulletin 20 ARLP020
From Tad Cook, K7RA
Seattle, WA May 20, 2011
To all radio amateurs

SB PROP ARL ARLP020
ARLP020 Propagation de K7RA

A decline in sunspot activity this week showed as a 23 point drop in average daily sunspot numbers, and nearly 9 point decline in average daily solar flux. These compare, of course, to the numbers for the previous reporting week, which always runs from Thursday through Wednesday.

But with this decline in activity there were three new sunspot groups on May 14, and then one new sunspot group each day following, through May 18. But on May 19, there was no new sunspot group, and the daily sunspot number declined from 65 on Wednesday to 36 on Thursday. Heightened geomagnetic activity occurred from May 15-17, with the planetary A index in the low double-digits.

The latest prediction from NOAA/USAF is for much lower solar flux than predicted on Wednesday, May 18. The forecast predicts solar flux readings of 84 and 82 on May 20-21, then 80 on May 22-26, jumping to 90 on May 27 and 110 on May 28-30. Predicted planetary A index is 7 on May 20-21, 5 on May 22-25, then 8, 22, 18, 15, 15 and 8 on May 26-31.

Geophysical Institute Prague predicts quiet conditions May 20-21, quiet to unsettled May 22, and quiet May 23-26.

On Wednesday, May 18 the solar flux was predicted at 92 on May 20-26, much higher than numbers forecast a day later and referenced above.

Last week's Propagation Forecast Bulletin ARLP019 mentioned that most sunspots lately appear in the Sun's northern hemisphere, but on May 19 they are all in the southern hemisphere. Go to http://spaceweather.com/ and on the upper right check the archive for May 18. Note the two sunspot groups, 1214 and 1216, in the southern hemisphere. Now change to May 19, and note sunspot group 1218, also in the southern hemisphere. On May 20 it shows all sunspots only in the southern half.

Today the new June 2011 issue of WorldRadio Magazine is available online, for free. Go to http://www.worldradiomagazine.com to download the latest issue, and check out Carl Luetzelschwab, K9LA's propagation column on pages 30-33. He gives an interesting treatise on solar flux and sunspot numbers.

The only mail this week was from K4FNC, and is not the usual type of question about propagation, but he asked, "Can you tell me when is the best time to make contact with the space station on 2 meters or the 440 frequencies?" Quite a bit of information on ARISS is on the ARRL web site at http://www.arrl.org/amateur-radio-on-the-international-space-station.

If you click on the "Frequently Asked Questions" link on the left side, this gives you a lot of the details, such as how to track the space station. The link to AMSAT at http://www.amsat.org/amsat-new/tools even gives a method for tracking that doesn't need your own tracking software. Click on Online Satellite Pass Predictions, select ISS, and enter FM05nb for the grid square for K4FNC, click Predict, and this gives the time for AOS (Acquisition of Signal) and LOS (Loss of Signal) for his location.

If you would like to make a comment or have a tip for our readers, email the author at, k7ra@arrl.net.

For more information concerning radio propagation, see the ARRL Technical Information Service web page at http://arrl.org/propagation-of-rf-signals. For an explanation of the numbers used in this bulletin, see http://arrl.org/the-sun-the-earth-the-ionosphere. An archive of past propagation bulletins is at http://arrl.org/w1aw-bulletins-archive-propagation. Find more good information and tutorials on propagation at http://mysite.ncnetwork.net/k9la/index.html.

Monthly propagation charts between four USA regions and twelve overseas locations are at http://arrl.org/propagation.

Instructions for starting or ending email distribution of ARRL bulletins are at http://arrl.org/bulletins.

Sunspot numbers for May 12 through 18 were 29, 29, 64, 54, 63, 57, and 65, with a mean of 51.6. 10.7 cm flux was 92.8, 91.5, 91.4, 94.5, 92.2, 91.5, and 90.6, with a mean of 92.1. Estimated planetary A indices were 3, 4, 4, 11, 12, 10, and 6, with a mean of 7.1. Estimated mid-latitude A indices were 2, 3, 3, 9, 10, 8, and 4, with a mean of 5.6.

The "end of the Obama Presidency is at an end"? You are not even semi-literate. No wonder Corsi's drivel appeals to you. He is one of the

This would be the book that has been totally discredited by Factcheck.org as a pack of lies, would it? Right.

Oh, and there's an infinite supply of oil at the earth's core? The man's a lunatic.

John I am jealous Scot wont talk to me Limprod wont talk to me,bi-george and BDK are eat up with morgellans they got while being Chemtrailed, Anal is obsessed with rocky and Governmentshit 2 is trying to get them to put DDT back in the chemtrail planes in hopes that it will kill the morgellin outbreak.

What good that will do is anybodys guess I think they need to spray weed killer on us to kill the roots.However a mixture of DDT might help dissolve the crystals.

All I wanted to do was expose the missile attack at the Pentagram.

I guess I'm the only one left,Did the rature happen already and I was not a choosen one and missed the abduction?

Well, as I post this it's just after 10:00 MST in AZ, USA, so I assume Europe and all points east are experiencing terrible earthquakes.

Interesting puzzle... While AZ doesn't go on DST, the Navajo Nation, which is in NE AZ, does. And there's an area completely enclosed by the Nation which follows the AZ practice rather than that of the Nation. Since the effects happen based on a local time of 18:00 (6:00 PM for the uninitiated) ;-), exactly what can we expect to see?

So many loons; so little time...

After investigating what Corsi has put in his books, I think the man has something, indeed, he has a very high percentage of this facts, observations, data, evidence and ducks in a row!

obamas' executive orders to hide his past are but one example of how, "... where there is smoke, there is usually fire."

Take obamas' whacky mom hanging in Bill Letters(sp?) bar on Hotel Street in Honolulu, Hawaii. A slut-whore claiming an immaculate conception, then running off to Kenya and appealing to obamas family to accept obama as theirs, obama sr. refusing to marry Ann -- obamas' mommy, etc.

I mean, what can you find out about obama that makes anything about him seem proper?

We might just as well slap the offspring of a crack-whore in the whitehouse!

EVERYTHING, and I mean EVERYTHING about obama is WRONG ... it just starts with the fraudulent birth certificate. On close examination it is a black and bottomless hole of crime and deception!

If it walks like a duck, talks like a duck, acts like a duck -- it is MOST LIKELY A DUCK! DUH!

If it walks like a moron, talks like a moron, acts like a moron - it most likely is a moron. Fits you to a tee.

Yes, all we ever see from you is your opinions, conclusions, visions, etc. I think we all know what you represent -- stating in a million more times will do you no better ... but you have the right to the same free speech I do -- carry on ... why you should think that singling me out and telling me all about you and your beliefs is worthy of your or my time simply amazes me ... I could never be any more interested that this NG is, and most likely less ...

The loons will make up another date for 'doomsday' . Dec 21, 2012 is much more popular , as a matter of fact . Anyone still recalls the Y2K bullcrap ?

Living as I do in an earthquake prone country there has been little (virtually no) seismic activity.
Is the media going to go round to the fools door and interview him again as to why he was so wrong ?
Now I suppose we will be berated with all manner of excuses as to how

Liberty Net: May 14, 2011

http://3950.net/2011/05/liberty-net-may-14-2011/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

FROM ARIZONA TO MAINE, from the Midwest plains to Florida, amateur radioï¿½s free speech Liberty Net just keeps getting more and more popular, even with the advance of Summertime conditions on 75 meters.

Here are just a few of the subjects brought up this week:

ï¿½ Washington, DCï¿½s ï¿½Police Weekï¿½ included a moment of extreme irony when Michelle Obama welcomed a ï¿½rapperï¿½ to the White House who has openly sung the praises of of numerous killers of police officers. (23 minutes)

ï¿½ Users of the Google Chrome browser ï¿½ or Adobe Acrobat Pro ï¿½ are easily able to see that the White Houseï¿½s ï¿½long form birth certificateï¿½ PDF file is layered, which would be unnecessary if the file was a true scan of a paper document. Why would such serious anomalies be present in a simple scan of a real birth certificate? Alternately, why would a skilled faker purposely fuel doubts by leaving the layers in? But the most important question is: Why hasnï¿½t a real expert been invited to examine the original? (31 minutes)

ï¿½ Some school districts are raising local property taxes by 5 per cent. every year ï¿½ a doubling time of just 14 years. Some are even trying to extract more than that from homeowners, many of them on the edge of bankruptcy themselves. With current economic conditions, governments need to be absolutely forbidden from doing this. (1 hour 10 minutes)

ï¿½ In some primarily non-White areas of Illinois, real estate has become so worthless that the Bank of America is literally giving away homes they canï¿½t sell at any price. Note to those who might want to live in one of these houses: Waking or sleeping or cooking in the kitchen, youï¿½d be well-advised to be armed at all times. (1 hour 18 minutes)

ï¿½ One of Obamaï¿½s half-brothers is Abongo Obama who, like his father, is a Muslim polygamist. He is close to his famous half-brother, and lives in Kenya, where he recently acquired a third wife. He is head of the Barack H. Obama Foundation, http://barackhobamafoundation.org/ (1 hour 34 minutes)

ï¿½ According to the BBC, in the Congo 1,152 women are raped every day. Possibly for genetic reasons, rape is deeply ingrained in the national culture there, and is even commonly used in military operations. (1 hour 44 minutes)

ï¿½ If you hear the Liberty Net next time ï¿½ only a few hours from this writing ï¿½ then I guess you wereni¿½t raptured along with Harold Campingï¿½s true believers, who predicted that the miraculous event would take place by 6PM today. (1 hour 59 minutes)

ï¿½ In Greece, as in Iceland, awareness of what the bankers have done to steal the nationï¿½s wealth is growing. A new political party has been formed, called the IWP (ï¿½I Wonï¿½t Payï¿½) Party, indicating a strong spirit of resistance to paying interest to the Shylocks for the ï¿½loansï¿½ which were created out of thin air anyway. (2 hours 9 minutes)

You can find the Liberty Net on 75 meters, almost always somewhere between 3950 and 3999 kHz SSB, every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time. Please check in, and also listen live on the Internet via N2SAG or N2IRJ, or listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted here at http://3950.net every week. The audio files are usually posted on the Sunday morning following the net ï¿½ youï¿½ll always see the latest file at the top of the right column ï¿½ just click to listen or download.

Thanks to W1WCR for running the Liberty Net for over three decades, and thanks to N2IRJ and N2SAG for giving the net a powerful online presence.

Then you have a scientific explanation to the question of where all the other forms of DNA based life that were created are at?

It's NOT logical that only one form of DNA was ever created for all of earths history and it was able to reproduce right out of the gate.

Explain the odds of that in a scientific way... Then tell us where all the failed DNA is at?

Oh, that comes from the nutjob who posted his "expert" analysis of the frames from the Pentagon surveillance video showing the plane crashing into the side of the Pentagon.

Of course, what both this "expert" and joe failed to even consider is that even on the video the SCALE of the image would clearly preclude a missile given that it's at least 2 stories in height as compared to the 5 stories of the Pentagon.

But the voice over from the "expert" says it was a missile, and that's good enough "proof" for Joe.

Sorry, I don't see "common good" even mentioned much less any assertion they are defining what it is.

Further I asked YOU to explain it. Not Obama, Not Hillary, but YOU.

So what do YOU mean by "Common Good"?

I think I even asked that question above.

"Please define exactly what you mean by "Common Good"?"

So what part of "you" is beyond your comprehension?

No, he would not have been. The law has been cited and you're wrong.
His mother was not old enough - she had not been physically present in the USA for five years after the age of 14 at the time of his birth.
Those who would have been citizens at birth are identified in the law.
Hussein did not qualify, due to the age and residency of his Maoist mother.

Sorry - you have nothing.

Y2K was very real. What it wasn't was the End Of The World disaster the media made it out to be. It could have been, if it were not identified in the late 90s and something done about it. As it was we had enough time to eliminate the problem.

the snarky fuckwitted tard boy lied:

> Yes, he

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

I have repeatedly pointed out, the three documents:

1) The Declaration of Indepence.

2) The Constitution proper.

3) The Bill of Rights.

I refer to all three as simply "The Constitution." All three, together, establish Constitutional law. All three support each other, and no ones education would be complete without an understanding of all three ... these three documents are "the Constitution" ... the Constitution is only about supporting the ideals express in the Declaration of Independence.

If you look at the figures on this page, you will find, in 2007, in America:

1) The top 1% have 42.7 of the financial wealth.

2) The next 19% have 50.3% of the wealth.

3) The bottom 80% have 7.0% of the wealth.

So, according to those figures, the top 20% of the population have 42.7 + 50.3 = 93% of the financial wealth.

This situation has worsened since 2007 ...

I'd say we tax those top 20% of the population, what say all of you?

This is why Satire is lost upon the LIBs.

LIBs want, in fact, need you to believe that your Rights, are things, like a chair that can be expropriated from you on demand, in the name of the common good, and, of course by those, them, acting by the 'will of the people' which is, of course, in evidence everywhere yet existant in no one.

Why shouldn't some be sacrificed so that, they, the LIBs may live?
and of course, it is not that they Value their own lives, they strive to displace those who actually do, and would.

LIBs need you to believe in the existance of the non-existant, the unreal, the insubstantial, best summarized as the Common Good.

If they can get you to believe that, they can get you to Pity the Devil for being EVIL -- and that they do...

LIBs. What price their Vision?

Today was the end of the earth "for some people", they died in car accidents and fell off buildings and drowned and such.

Anyone that expects this is the end can send me their cash....

the US . Something like 14 X100KW !

Problem is, satire is generally lost in text without some emicons, and given some of the crap people post it's not safe to assume a poster is engage in satire.

I will simply note the whole "it was just a joke" defense, and acknowledge you couldn't explain what you meant by the term you used.

The problem is the LIBs ceaseless Quest for the Unearned remains forever Ceaseless because the Value-unearned, retains no Value...

Top Gear, U.S.version on the History channel.Why do they always make a coffee table using a cylinder block? and a piston upside down for an ash tray, like some people do.Some 1950s Ford cars had two windows mounted on the hood so people could see the smokey grimey dirty engine without lifting the hood.I saw one parked on Capitol Street back in the 1950s when I went to see a movie down town.
That is soooooooo Tacky ass!

My coffee table is a regular coffee table that looks like a coffee table is suppose to look like.My cig ash tray is an old Tuna can, much Better than a steenkin piston any day.

Say Nite Nite doggy.

At least that was funny, not believable but... I get a chuckle out of the lack of ideas on how life just happened but it never "just happened" ever again? What happened to all the elements being available on this planet to create life?

What were the odds?

2556. RFI & router

Here's an actual shortwave-related question! Can anyone out there recommend a router that doesn't generate much RFI?

My current setup makes too much radio noise. By process of elimination I have narrowed it down to my Linksys WRT54Gv3 router. It isn't the b/g wifi, that's turned off and the WLAN led is out. I don't need wifi, and if I did, I'd configure this old router as a simple AP. The router has an injection-molded case, apparently not much shielding.

Goal: I want to use fldigi for digital modes. Thanks for your recommendation.

I have a similar issue. I have had great success with clamp on ferrite chokes from All Electronics surplus. They work well for HF, but I still get the motorboat on MW. I loop every UTP once through the clamp, as close to the router as practicable. You have to do the power supply wire and I recommend using a plug strip with a choke on it, too. I love psk31. 73

Is there an FAQ for this newsgroup?

Last update I had heard was from John Kasupski about 3 1/2 years ago.
In response to suggestions by other rec.radio.shortwave readers that an update of Ralph Brandi's original version could be useful, he loudly and forcefully insisted that he was the only author of such an FAQ, and no other person should get involved.

No such updated FAQ beyond an initial, and incomplete, draft was presented, along with forceful reminders from him that no one else should get involved. Has anything been heard from him, or any other replacement maintainer, since then?

2566. Appreciation - QSL for AFN Diego Garcia

As I mentioned earlier, I obtained a QSL card for reception of this AFN Diego Garcia transmission on April 30, 2011. Needless to say, and am very pleased and thrilled with this card, as this mere 3 kW (?) omnidirectional station is the most nearly antipodal low-power station I have managed to dig out of the suburban QRM at my home. I know lots of other folks have gotten this QSL, but for me, receipt of this QSL is a significant part of fulfilling one of my many lifetime hobby dreams.

I received worthy and important guidance from several people, without which I would not have heard and recorded the detail of this station at the time I did, and which I acknowledge here -

To RHF (Roy) for bringing up the subject of AFN on 12579 at approximately the right time, and following up with additional relevant communiques - his tip-off is greatly appreciated. Thanks, Roy!

To dxAce (Steve) for publicly noting the time when it was transmitting and providing valuable insight into nailing down enough detail to net this station. Thanks Steve!

...and to Victor Goonetilleke of Sri Lanka, who kindly confirmed that AFN Diego Garcia was indeed transmitting at the moment I heard them despite the time parameters listed in their A11 schedule. This helped me to be confident that I was not hearing an image or mixing product rather than the station. Thanks Victor!

Thanks! The SFI really makes a difference - when we had that contemporary high of 157 last month, reception went through the roof. Now it's just mediocre again at best, although Radio East New Britain on 3385 was doing very well again this morning at 1000 UTC and SIBC was quite good about 0800z on the 21st, despite the noxious QRM from Radio Rebelde.

Thanks - I also continue to note these two stations overlapping on 6160; it makes for an interesting comparison - sometimes they seem to carry the same program (and you get an echo effect), other times they beat up on each other with different programs.

BpnJ,

The Top-of-the-Hour [TOH] News seems to have the 'Echo' as it is current and timely : Most likely an "Real-Time" direct feed from the CBC.

The remain Hourly Programing is "Time-Shifted" for the Daily & Over-Night Programing for the 'Local' Area and 'Local' Time :

CKZN from St. John's, Newfoundland : UTC-3.5
http://www.timeanddate.com/worldclock/city.html?n=175

CKZU from Vancouver, British Colombia : UTC-7
http://www.timeanddate.com/worldclock/city.html?n=256

The Local Weather a/o Traffic Report or the Local Station ID can make it easier.

NOTE @ 5~8 AM PST/PDT you should usually hear the 'Local' CBU-AM 690 kHz Vancouver ID Info.

Since the figures are actually a summary of the federal reserve and govt. figures, the ultimate message comes from them ... you will notice, no one is able to come up with figures which dispute them -- that often happens with the truth ...

Wouldn't it be a REAL story if after all these years, we found out the Stephen Hawking, who has endured a life of severe multiple sclerosis and needs an interpreter to translate a very mushed, almost unintelligible speech, was actually saying nothing worth much.

I still want the monitoring device out of my back Richard Nixon and the CIA stuck there when George H w Bush kidnapped and tortured me in 1982 Florida Keys during German Chancellors Zionist appointment.

Great job Bruce.

Diego Garcia is one of my favorite amateur QSL's. Mainly because I made the contact with under 100 watts (SSB).

Just because your opinion is that DNA is proof of intelligent design does not make it so, oh completely scientifically ignorant one. So, the second assertion is without basis at all.

The afterlife is a myth. It is the exact definition of a myth. There is no evidence, let alone proof, whatsoever. As far as we know, when you die, you DIE. The energy in your chemical bonds goes back in the environment and that's that. Fairy story is a derogatory way to put it, but basically correct. Whether you choose to believe it depends on how much you love and/or fear God.

SSB Voice. A VQ9 prefix as I recall. At first I thought it was a Canadian station. Lucky I called him and asked for his location.

John, I can't say anthing about DNA being proof of intelligent design, etc. But for sure I can point often to the DNA being the basis of a lot of mistakes within the concept of intelligent design. :)

Yes, I see examples of what you speak about, EVERYWHERE!

In my spare time, I take a handful of glass, plastic, wood, metal, etc., toss 'em in a mud puddle, come back in a few million (or billion) years and start digging up microwaves, TVs, cell phones, etc., it is "spontaneous generation", only fools don't believe in it ... ROFLOL

Of course, since the coding of DNA is much more complex than any computer program ever written, it might take a few more billions of years to get it to "Spontaneously Generate" -- morons, don't you just love them???

Quite often, the student will find fault in the teachers/engineers/creators design(s.) Most often, it is the student who is in error ...

You should get your self a litterbox and drink the cat shit directly from it.Buying coffee beans eaten by mearcats and boiling their dung to inhance your tastes is quite a stretch ,dont you think?

JS,

God and an After-Life are NOT a matter of Logic and Intellect : They Are a Matter of Faith and The Power of Belief.

Stephen Hawking may in-deed be a Master of Logic...

Stephen Hawking may in-deed be a Great Mind...

The Question Becomes on any pronouncement -wrt-God and an After-Life by Stephen Hawking :

Is Stephen Hawking a Man-of-Faith ? ? ?
-?-where-are-stephen-hawking's-credentials-wrt-faith-?-

Is Stephen Hawking a Believer ? ? ?
-?-where-are-stephen-hawking's-credentials-
-wrt-the-power-of-belief-?-

one wonders... is 'knowing-in-your-heart' the same as knowing in your mind . . .
and that is something to think about ~ RHF

Yeah, in fact of the business,,,,,, I read an article in Popular Mechanics magazine (snail mail magazines, I get them) about eight - nine something years ago about testing DNA.Some different human DNAs are are so much alike, it is hard to see any difference at all.You can find that magazine article at your local libraries, or look around online for it.

But your plane still wont fit in that little red box it will only contain an object no larger than 16 feet!

Everyone can see the missile in front of the solid rocket plume!

Oh, undoubtedly; I was only curious about how the earthquakes would be scheduled in the areas I mentioned. And IIRC, unlike yesterday's Apocalypse-that-wasn't, the Mayan Doomsday isn't supposed to be sequential, so the "problem" wouldn't exist for that one; "We will all go together when we go, every Hottentot and every Eskimo" (apologies to Tom Lehrer). ;-)

> Anyone still recalls the Y2K

Sure, but that was about a genuine potential problem which got hyped to an insane level by the mass media. This latest "problem" was neither genuine nor rational.

These guys are all over the place! It's fun to hear their transmissions from a transmitter site near Moskva.

PS

I did not pay any attention to what the guy in the middle link says I just saw the missile on my own look at it before the red box is drawn!

Then in the top link you can see it over and over again,There is no plane just a missile launched from withing the fenced in constrution area.

What kind of military vehicle is that at mark 7:03 in the video below a flatbed firetruck? I recall seeing it parked beside the construction gererater dont you?

I also have a contact with 100 watts SSB, on 20 meters as I recall, and using an inverted vee dipole at about 25'.

If I get ambitious I'll dig out the QSL and get the callsign of the fellow I worked.

That was the good old days of solar cycle 23. Also worked Palmer

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

One problem with applying the law in such a way is that it would mean that any child born to an unwed mother under the age of 20 would not be a citizen of any country.

That's almost certainly not true. First, there is a high probability the child would have the citizenship of the other parent. Second, many countries have provisions in their citizenship laws that children born in their territory who otherwise would be stateless are citizens of the country in which they are born.

In any case, there are sound reasons why US law does not automatically confer citizenship on any child born abroad to a US citizen. In fact, such laws are the norm.

The only definition that is in any way valid is that "God" is a personification of forces way beyond the average person's comprehension. In your case, I'd be surprised if you understand the concept of personification. You seem to understand so little of everything else conceptual.

This is like the Constitution. It can never be changed because it is already 3/5 perfect:

13 What is rec.radio.shortwave for?

Welcome to the rec.radio.shortwave newsgroup. This group was created late in 1989 after a suggestion by Richard Shapiro, in order for those of us who are interested in the hobby of monitoring radio communications to have a friendly place to exchange messages, tips, and opinions. If you are interested in this sort of hobby, then we think that you will be at home here.

This is a set of monthly postings put together to answer some of the more commonly asked basic questions about the hobby. There is a posting explaining some of the basics of shortwave (HF) radio, and one covering medium wave (also known as AM) and FM DXing. There is also one covering scanning the higher frequencies (VHF and up) that appears in the newsgroup rec.radio.scanner. If you find that you have other questions, either following up items mentioned here, or other questions, please post. There are a number of people here with varying degrees of expertise and experience who are more than willing to help.
We hope we've anticipated many of the questions the beginner will have. And so, without further ado....

As stated above this group was created for USENETers to have a place to discuss the radio monitoring hobby. This group is not moderated, however 'serious' arguments and any kind of flame wars are strongly discouraged. That is not to say that genuine disagreement and discussion of differing opinions is not welcome. We only ask that you keep the tone friendly, and in the spirit of international cooperation upon which the hobby is founded.

This group is intended to be a place where ANY radio monitoring topic can and should be discussed. We are happy to hear from posters who listen to any part of the radio or microwave spectrum, from DC to daylight. We discuss topics of almost any kind, ranging from (but not limited to) shortwave broadcasting, DXing small or distant shortwave stations, utility and teletype monitoring, military eavesdropping, station schedules, QSLing sw broadcasters, spectrum usage, equipment design and modifications, antennas, receiver reviews and recommendations, and many more.

Despite what the newsgroup name might imply, we definitely DO NOT limit discussions to shortwave only. Any radio-related topics are welcome. People interested in scanning VHF frequencies may find that the rec.radio.scanner newsgroup more accurately reflects their interests, and people interested in pirate radio may want to check the alt.radio.pirate newsgroup, although this group seems to be more interested in building small FM transmitters than in hearing distant shortwave pirates.

For more in-depth answers to questions you may have, we direct your attention to the postings entitled "Welcome to rec.radio.shortwave (Shortwave)", and "Welcome to rec.radio.shortwave (AM/FM DXing)", depending on where your interests lie. Scanner enthusiasts are also encouraged to read Bob Parnass' excellent monthly FAQ postings on rec.radio.scanner.

FAQ, of course, stands for Frequently Asked Questions. It is considered good form to read the FAQ(s) for a newsgroup before posting to ensure that ones posting is appropriate. You can find FAQs for most newsgroups at ftp://rtfm.mit.edu/pub/ by anonymous ftp, or on WWW at http://www.cis.ohio-state.edu/hypertext/faq/usenet/FAQ-List.html . Look under the following URL for a list of all radio-related FAQs.

http://www.cis.ohio-state.edu/hypertext/faq/usenet/radio/top.html

P.S. For those of you without the patience to look in the appropriate place, the BBC World Service can be reached by e-mail at worldservice.letters@bbc.co.uk. This has become probably the single most frequently requested piece of information on rec.radio.shortwave.

The universe is indeed a vast and complex place. I once belived all that I had been taught. But as an engineer. the science is overwhelming. Just look at the Hubble deep space images and peer back 13 billion years.

To imagine that some supernatural being could be that enormously omnipotent defies all rational logic. It defies all known physics.
That's why its called faith.

God is clever. You have to die to learn the truth. How much more unfair could that be?

No, it takes some serious mental problems, serious drug abuse, or a combo of both. What is it with you?

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

Yeah, same here - whenever CRI (b = Beijing) comes on 5955 at 1100, always a bunch of bleedover. Need to shift to USB narrow. China also uses this frequency for a Brasilia relay at 1200z in Mongolian, of all things - even as Radio Sao Paulo from Brazil itself uses the channel 24/7. Does the world REALLY need all this from China?

However, you wish to tax the wealthy even more even when the stats show that they pay about where they should be when looking at the amount of wealth or income that they show.

The wealthy, whose income is reported on 1099s, pay a lower effective tax rate then people whose income is report on a W-2.
Up to 33% if you work at a job.....10% on dividends......for not working.

The more your make from NOT WORKING, the more likely your tax rate will approach 17.7% asymptotically.

The so-called "common good" destroys the individual, and in the process, destroys the "common good". Therefore, there is NO common good.

So what? The top 1% owns about 42% of the wealth, has about about 35% of the total net worth and pays about 40% of the income tax. Those numbers are pretty much in line.

Meanwhile the bottom 80% owns about 7% of the wealth, about 15% of the net worth and pays 11% of the income taxes. In fact the bottom 50% only pays 2.7% of those income taxes.

Again, pretty much in line.

Did you see that curly thing at the end? (There's another one) It means that it was a question. How is that putting words in your mouth? all you need to do is answer it....the words you use will be your own.

> America's wealthy are under taxed.

So far, you haven't shown that. I have shown data, you have simply run your mouth and accused me of trying to put words in there for you to say.

Excuse me, but what exactly do you mean by "effective tax rate"?

Is that some sort of realspeech for "we need to tax them for an even larger share than what they have to pay now?"

Did you mean "Our", you retard?
How would YOU know, you unemployable retard?

You can't afford gas, let alone the final payments on your Yugo, you retard.
Get a job, AFTER you get an education, you retard!

I too am a survivor of 911 I was not there at the time like most government paid stooges.But I can tell you the cartoon they put on for the TV audience was nothing like realy being there! The area was roped off and most of the props were put into the staged area before the hologramed air craft was projected!

They even put the JT8MD engine on the sidewalk and covered it up with a tarp so it would go unnoticed till after the hologram!

Hell, I don't need it, I would just like him to send it in. Whatever amount he feels he can afford and mark it for some budget item he likes.
I just want him to keep his hand out of my pocket before he takes any money out of his.

I gots me a real Good Idee.I am going to put two of my radios in my attic, each one plugged into a long extension cord which I can plug into the wall outlet by my end of doggy's couch.Super Talk Missy Sippy on one radio, Country Music on the other radio.I will put the two radios by the roof vents in my attic, I will have them turned up Loud! Any time I want to turn them on, all I would need to do is reach within arms length where I am sitting on doggy's couch.Those B HO Butt Kissers will just love that,,, all day and all night.

That must be BHO armored car . Got stuck upon exiting the gates of the embassy in Dublin . That's quite possible - I once got stuck the same exact way !

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

Is there a summary of the taxes which they are using in that figure, somewhere?

For example, are these figures only dealing with income tax?

Do they take into consideration fees, licenses, fines, federal excise taxes, state sales taxes, fuel taxes, property taxes, etc., etc.

No, 1% of the people in the highest income taxes are NOT paying their fair share ... and, all those other figures are just as skewed ...

It would seem to me that it would be up to those claiming that 1% isn't playing "their fair share" to prove it.

So I suggest that if you wish to prove they aren't paying their fair share that you do so, otherwise it would seem that adequate evidence has been presented to suggest they are.

I note that neither you nor Sid offer ANY evidence at all much less from a
.gov or .edu site.

So Sid makes an accusation that they are somehow not paying their fair share.

Even though it's not required RD presents evidence that suggests they are.

Where is Sid's evidence?

Where is Sid, or you, presenting evidence to refute what was presented to show they are paying their fair share?

Seems to me, it is those who are accusing some individual or group of wrong doing to prove their case.

So when are you going to hold Sid to present some sort of evidence much less the .gov or .edu requirement you demand of others?

Double standard?

Looks like it to me.

Irrelevent and has nothing to do with the issue or the point made.

However, who built is was government, and who is piloting it is a combination of both Democrats and Republicans.

You don't like it, then maybe you need to do something about all the spending taking place on BOTH sides.

So you claim, but I'm still waiting for you, or Sid, to present ANY evidence to support their evidence is worthless, much less ANY evidence to support the claim that they aren't paying their fair share.

Seems to me the only evidence presented refutes the claims and all you can do is case accusations within no support of your own to disprove that evidence.

Exactly, SHOW me they aren't paying their fair share. Come on, "show us what you got, if anything more than just personal attack, opinion and BS....".

Where is Sid's evidence?

It goes back in time to where the freemasons were chased out of Europe,they joined forces with the USSR and fought with them.

Now they are a team the free masons new world and the solviet union.are one and the same. The fall of the Solviet Union was a shame,it just passed the sword to their counter parts the freemason's USA!

The USA also surported Hitler and they faked his suicide,and the NEW WORLD ORDER commenced.

They just played like they were different Governments but they were the same since 1776.

NO! The Soviet Union never worked with the Rockerfellers. Revolution is the solution for the ruling class oppressors and even including illuminati secret bankers. It puts the masses in charge and removes the Rockerfellers out of power. Your head is too much in the clouds.
Conspiracy thinking is a certain way of looking at things, which gives you a false ideology (although conspriacies, do happen like Pearl Harbor, the Gulf of Token and 911--You'll note that the Soviets and the Maoists never did a false flag attack on the masses) There is revolutionary analysis of politics which are far broader and deeper than the false notions of the John Birch Society screwballs.

Setting the Record Straight

The Outrageous Equating of Communism with Nazism Revolution #011, August 14, 2005, posted at revcom.us

The following article was written by a member of the Set the Record Straight project.

One of the lies about communism that has been repeated over and over again is the equating of the Soviet Union under Stalin with Hitler's Germany. The comparison rules socialism utterly out of order, paints it as a nightmare, rules it off the agenda.and is a total lie!

Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union—Opposite Societies
Nazism or German fascism was a form of capitalist rule marked by extreme repression and open terror against the masses and the abandonment of bourgeois parliamentary and electoral mechanisms. Ideologically, Nazism based itself on the defense of private-capitalist property, the idea of German/Aryan racial superiority, hatred of Jews (anti- Semitism), and anti-communism.

The German economy as it was reorganized under the Nazis remained capitalist through and through: it was based on exploitation and capitalist expansion, and the leading industrial-financial capitalist groups retained their economic control and holdings.

When the Soviet Union was socialist, from 1917 to 1956, its economy was based on socialist public ownership. Relations of exploitation had been overthrown and no longer dominated (although they were not completely eliminated). The economy was structured to meet the needs of the people.

When the Nazis came to power in Germany, they went about "restructuring" and "purifying" German society: imprisoning and murdering communists, gypsies, homosexuals, "half-breeds," drug addicts, and other sections of society that the Nazis deemed to be biological and moral "pollutants." Ultimately, the Nazi program led to the mass murder of millions of Jews and other people.

By contrast, in the Soviet Union, a pillar of the Bolshevik program was putting an end to national oppression and establishing equality of national languages and national cultures. With respect to the Jewish people, the revolution in power immediately took strong measures to combat and uproot anti-Semitism. Before the Bolshevik Revolution, Jews were subject to constant pogroms—mob massacres by peasants who were told absurd lies about the Jews. This was overthrown in the socialist revolution, and the confinement of Jews to certain geographic areas and discrimination in employment were ended.

The Nazi party rallied German society around an ultra-nationalist program of preservation of German blood and soil and the vanquishing of a fabricated Judeo-communist “conspiracy” to control the world. The Nazi ideology of irrational hatred of certain peoples and racist superiority was rooted in the economic system of capitalism—a system of horrific human suffering even in “peaceful times.” The Nazi mind-set aggressively disdained critical, rational, and scientific thought (very much like the Christian fascists in the U.S. today). The model “Good German” was unthinking, obedient, and blindly followed authority.

Communism is founded on a scientific outlook that enables people to understand the world and society in their motion and development. Communism is founded on an internationalist world-view of achieving a classless world free of oppression and exploitation. And a defining feature of socialist society is that the masses of people are mobilized to consciously transform economic, political, and social relations and institutions in the direction of classless society and to revolutionize traditional ideas and values that reflect and reinforce class distinctions.

Collectivization of Agriculture
In the Soviet Union, the means of production, which had been seized by the revolution, were placed in the service of society (instead of serving exploitation). And, in the countryside, an unprecedented revolution took place. The formerly isolated, suppressed, and impoverished peasants were led by the Communist Party to rise up, cast off millennia of enslavement and mind-numbing tradition, and overthrow cruel and vicious exploitation and oppression. This process was especially dramatic for women, who made huge strides towards equality after being treated like animals.

Were harsh measures carried out by the proletarian state in the Soviet Union against some sectors of the population? Yes, but the dictatorship of the proletariat has nothing in common with the Nazi program, the Nazi outlook, or Nazi methods. For example, many anti-Communist ideologues and historians allege that the collectivization carried out in the Soviet countryside in the late 1920s and early 1930s was a savage campaign of expropriation and murder. In fact this collectivization was a drive to develop a new system of agricultural production based on collective ownership, and it ignited a genuine upheaval against centuries- old authority, tradition, and oppression in the countryside.

The kulaks, the rich peasants who employed hired laborers, were a focus and target of this struggle. But this had nothing to do with their ethnicity. It had to do with their class position, that is, with the economic power and influence the kulaks exerted in the countryside. It had to do with the fact that they were working to undermine efforts to carry forward collectivization and strengthen the new socialist economy—the kulaks had hoarded grain, profiteered in rural markets, destroyed livestock, and organized sections of peasants against the regime. In this period when many peasants were starving, the kulaks were stripped of their private economic holdings, which were turned into the social property of the collectives. Many of the kulaks were punished, including being forced to leave certain areas. And sometimes this was done unfairly. But the kulaks were not made the object of genocide.

The Soviet approach to collectivization and the way the class struggle was waged in the countryside were not without problems. And Mao had big criticisms of the approach taken. There were serious excesses, including the fact that force was used in situations where persuasion should have been relied on. But this was within the context of a real struggle between revolution in the interests of the masses and counterrevolution.

World War 2
The German ruling class, under Nazi leadership, went to war with the Western powers as part of a struggle among the imperial powers for global supremacy. France, England, and the U.S. were all seeking to preserve and extend capitalist empire. The Nazis attacked the socialist Soviet Union in order to crush a socialist (anti-capitalist) revolution that was an inspiration to the world's oppressed and to gain control over a huge, strategically situated land mass, rich in resources.

In the studies that equate communism and Nazism it is also conveniently forgotten that the turning point of World War 2 was the defeat of the Nazi army by the Soviet Union under Stalin. During World War 2, more than 20 million Soviet citizens sacrificed their lives (with millions of communists among them). And Stalin led the Soviet people to defend their revolution against the Nazi-imperialist onslaught.

Setting the Record Straight—And Looking to the Future
Reactionaries who promote wild distortions to equate the socialist Soviet Union (until capitalism was restored after the death of Stalin) with Nazi Germany do so with an agenda that capitalism represents the end of history, and that exploitation and oppression are the highest that humanity can aspire to. Progressive people who uncritically repeat the equation of Nazism and communism should, instead, find out the true story, and ponder how they are objectively joining with open reactionaries in defending this system and ruling "out of order" any real and radical alternative to capitalism.

Well most Hispanics are Mexicans. That's why I use Mexican first before Brazilian or Peruvian or other South American National. Most Illegal aliens are Mexicans. That's the issue! Most Hispanic gangbangers are Mexicans.
So do you have problem with that? Those bastard are waving Mexican flag during Labor day protest in US territory. No Hispanic waved Brazilian or Peruvian flag. It's only Mexican waving their flag because they are anti-Americans in US society. That's the #1 Hispanic/Latino.problem we face.

According to Marxist Leninist Maoists, the Soviet Union became revisionist, --not genuinely Socialist. Revisionism is Socialism in name but Capitalist in deeds and fact. Mao Tse Tung criticized the Soviet Union in 1956 for going down the Capitalist road. For 30 years the USSR had a form of goulash socialism, State Capitalism.

Oh,well ... In that case Mao must be turning in his grave (or is it a crystal sarcophagus ?) due to China becoming the biggest capitalist enterprise that ever existed !

Research has proven that that the human brain has a "God Center". An area of the brain that when stimulated causes the subject to "feel" like they are surrounded by a benevolent presence. That feeling reduces our normal stress and anxiety chemicals to sub-tolerable levels. It is an evolutionary miracle. We are all programmed to believe in the divine. We crave it, it gives us comfort and most importantly it helps us deal with the anxiety of knowing that we will all die.

I know that it's hard for you to accept that we are all just accidents of evolution on this lonely planet. That there is no master plan. That it is all just random chaos and that there is no "afterlife". Although as a witness to several paranormal events I do know that the human energy we call "consciousness" continues to exist after the body passes. Who and what it all means is still a great mystery to me.

But again. God has made our existence quite unfair. We all have to die to learn the truth.

My truth is that whatever comforts you to deal with your existence is fine by me. It is what you were programmed for and I accept it as a great gift from the universe. But notice that I do not insult you or belittle you. I accept you as you are. It's what Jesus would do. Is it not?

You're wrong. Every "first" generation group of immigrants has always held on to their native roots. The English who came here were all subjects of the British crown LONG before they became "Americans" and they were proud of it. The only real Americans are the native Indians who were here long before our white ancestors arrived.

But your point is well taken. Gang bangers, illegals and evil doers are a problem. And if our stupid government would just decriminalize all drugs and redeploy those resources that fight the "drug war" to border protection the whole problem would go away. So focus your brain. The real problem isn't Hispanics. The real enemy is ourselves for using the wrong tactics and blaming the wrong causes. Take the profit out of drugs an our problem resolves itself overnight.

In most areas of life, paying a fair share is relative to what one gets. For instance, it costs more to buy private security for a mansion than for a hovel.

To Legions of the unwashed LIBs he is their Politico, their Fuhrer.
They LUST for the simpler times when you could fake reality just like he faked the character of a Man; were he to return to Office, they would SIMPLY be besides themselves.

The world is the way it is Precisely-Because of Bill Clinton that makes him an authority deFacto.

Bin Laden Lived To Fight Another Day—Thanks To Bill Clinton

When President Barack Obama made the historic announcement in the White House East Room about the killing of Osama bin Laden, the air was thick with irony. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton was there, and her husband's notorious narcissism and cavalier attitude about governance had allowed bin Laden to escape—in 1998, three years before the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon.

In his stunning 2003 book Dereliction of Duty, Air Force Lt. Col. Robert "Buzz" Patterson, a presidential aide and carrier of the "nuclear football," describes President Clinton's gross irresponsibility toward national security. Patterson tells how, in the fall of 1998, the watch officer in the White House Situation Room notified the president's national security adviser, Sandy Berger, that they had located bin Laden and had "a two-hour window to strike."

Here is Patterson's chilling account:

Berger ambled down the stairwell and entered the Sit[uation] Room. He picked up the phone at one of the busy controller consoles and called the president. Amazingly, President Clinton was not available. Berger tried again and again. Bin Laden was within striking distance. The window of opportunity was closing fast. The plan of attack was set and the Tomahawk [missile] crews were ready. For about an hour Berger couldn't get the commander in chief on the line. Though the president was always accompanied by military aides and the Secret Service, he was somehow unavailable. Berger stalked the Sit Room, anxious and impatient.

Patterson continues:

Finally, the president accepted Berger's call. There was discussion, there were pauses " and no decision. The president wanted to talk with his secretaries of Defense and State. He wanted to study the issue further. Berger was forced to wait. The clock was ticking. The president eventually called back. He was still indecisive. He wanted more discussion. Berger alternated between phone calls and watching the clock.

The dithering continued until it was too late"and bin Laden lived to fight another day. And to plot the Sept. 11 attacks.

That was not an isolated incident. On Sept. 13, 1996, while on the golf course with his lawyer friend Vernon Jordan, President Clinton had refused to take repeated urgent phone calls from Berger, who needed the president's approval for air strikes on Iraq. Patterson wrote: "Pilots were in the cockpits, waiting to launch, targets were identified, everything was in place, all [Berger] needed was the go-ahead."

He never got it. The protective cover of night lifted, and the mission was aborted.

There were other examples of gross and inexcusable incompetence. President Clinton twice managed to lose the nuclear codes that were necessary to activate the nation's nuclear arsenal.

There is yet another Clinton irony in view of the relentless tracking and eventual killing of bin Laden by the U.S. military and intelligence agencies in a brilliantly executed operation. Patterson relates an incident that occurred during the Clinton administration's very first week that typified its view of the military. Army Lt. Gen. Barry McCaffrey, the assistant to the chairman of the Joint Chiefs, greeted a young aide in a White House hallway with a cheery, "Good Morning."

The young aide replied, "I don't talk to the military." I consider that to be a firing offense for a White House pipsqueak.

Speaking of the military and also of Bill Clinton's predilections, Patterson describes a sordid incident in which the president"the commander-in-chief"groped a female steward on Air Force One. As an enlisted member of the U.S. Air Force, she opted not to make an issue of it and settled for a personal apology from the president.

This incident troubled Patterson: "I brooded over the fact that if our commander in chief had been actually serving in the armed services, he would have been jailed. His immunity struck me as completely unacceptable."

Another irony: Bill Clinton's chief of staff, who would certainly have known about this sorry state of affairs, was none other than Leon Panetta, currently the head of the CIA and the nominee to succeed Robert Gates as secretary of Defense. Panetta was also in the room when Obama made the bin Laden announcement. (During Panetta's forthcoming confirmation hearings, I hope the senators probe his role in suppressing the various "bimbo eruptions," as the molester-in-chief's sexual dalliances were known during the Clinton presidency. As they say in court, it goes to character.)

Just as we will never forget Sept. 11, we should not forget the dereliction of duty by President Clinton and those who were his enablers.

Sure they are. The numbers don't lie. You can not deny that the top 1% pay over 38% of all federal income taxes. That is not disputable.
It is a fact. What I see your side doing is avoiding the question of who is footing the bill and prefer to frame the question as how much of one's income is someone paying in taxes. Two different questions with two very different results. My point is when it comes to funding government it is indisputable who is doing just that. Nothing you say can change that.

We do not need innuendo, opinions or BS. We need exact figures on their paying their fair share as determined by the amount of money they make.

I think the reason that the figure are so hidden on all this data is What part of the top 1% pay 38% of the federal income tax bill isn't registering with you? Your statement that they pay little or contribute little is simply not true. The IRS numbers bear that out. Put your wealth envy aside and try to be just a little objective about this.

Fine, you just backed up my claim in my last post on re-framing the question as to who pays the bill as opposed to who pays what of their income.

Again, the numbers don't lie. I can't fathom how someone can say that where 1% foots 38% of the bill that they aren't paying their fair share. I'm not going to change your mind on that point so there really is no use in trying to convince you otherwise other than to say you're just flat out wrong.

Truth is, sure looks like the wealthiest 1% are not paying 42% of all of governments costs, and sure looks like the top 19% are not paying half of governments costs, until that happens they are NOT paying their fair share ... a flat tax can fix that ...

Truth is, redoubtably, the universe is unfolding just as it should, I think man has little affect on this outcome.

Truth is, if I were the creator, I would have created a "God center" into my creations brain for communication purposes ...

While this anecdotal evidence is interesting and worthy of study and research it is not clear evidence and proof which substantiates any current theories ... the creations are less than the creator, that is fact.

Let me put this more bluntly. If I buy and item and pay 7% sales tax, the top one percent should buy an item and pay a 42.7% sales tax, that way they will be contributing their fair share to run government ...

First of all, the data on that site is not effective in being able to reach any proper conclusions ... it has been conveniently arranged that way.

Even a professional accountant would need a great amount of time to be able to apply the data effectively, and then only with the data from other sources ...

RHF,

Thank you for your reply. I can see that you are one of the more knowledgeable and helpful posters here on rec.radio.shortwave. The readership definitely owes you a debt of gratitude.

While an FAQ wouldn't be noticed and read by all, getting it current and on a regular posting schedule could make it more visible. An FAQ might not be followed by everyone, but might be useful to provide justification for abuse complaints. It may also serve as a good baseline for a charter for the eventual moderated shortwave radio newsgroup.

Are there any objections to my suggestion that the 2008 attempt to update Ralph Brandi's original FAQ documents has been abandoned (with the replacement author's links long since broken from an expired Internet domain name) and the project is more or less "up-for-grabs" to any motivated and sincere volunteer?

Oh, you mean one like this?

A tax on ALL income no matter where derived. One deduction. Federal poverty level for a family of four and everybody gets that deduction.
Have a tax rate of, say 15% and the current poverty level at $24K and we get the following:

A person who earns up to $24K, pays nada...
A person who earns $50K, pays $3,900 (50-24x15%)
A person who earns $100K, pays $11,400 (100-24x15%)
A person who earns $500K, pays $71,400 (500-24x15%)
A person who earns a million pays $146,400 (1000-24x15%)

That do it for you?

No, he's the idiot who drove people away.

He came in here, and didn't have a clue where he was, posting from google he knew nothing of usenet, but acted like an expert.

You can't learn anything by poking in here once. You have to read the newsgroup, and the fact that you don't know anything about RHF is proof that you aren't paying attention to rec.radio.shortwave. The guy spouts off on any topic, just for the sake of spouting off.

He pathologically changes subject headers, he seems incapable of simply replying to a post. Witness he changed the subject header when he replied to you.

He has no real knowledge, he constantly posts links. Any fool can do a search. Witness that he doesn't know who you are, he even posted a link that you or the moderators of rec.radio.info posted.

He feels compelled to reply to everything, whether it's a topic he knows nothing of (but too often he then appears like he knows what he's talking about) or off-topic junk. He has to be top-dog, which means replying with his junk posts even though someone else (who is far more "useful" and "knowledgeable" to this newsgroup than RHF) had already posted the old faq.

There was a whole period when he tried to control the newsgroup, while at the very same time was part of the problem. He constantly replies to the political junk, he constantly replies to the cross-posted junk, he replies to everything. He gives approval to the off topic junk

He knows nothing of usenet, on more than one accasion he's taken to task the automatically posted posts here, like the one about using the phone line as a sw antenna. He doesn't grasp the point of it, or the validity of an automatic posting.

Yet the funny thing is, he is constantly posting the same junk links, rather than doing it more formally, the usenet way.

He gives the perception of "knowing things" because he racks up the posts. An idiot who has little to say, but people are dazzled because he posts all those links, because of his endless posts.

If you think RHF has validity here, then you have no authority to do anything, because you have no judgement on the matter. Keep out of the newsgroup if you recognize RHF.

This used to be a great newsgroup. It did cover the topic it was intended for, radio monitoring. It didn't suffer from idiot hams who thought "shortwave" meant amateur radio (discussing receiving the ham bands is on topic, but just because it takes place on shortwave does not make it relevant). There were posts about AM DXing and FM DXing, both valid under the umbrella that is too specific, but once upon a time one knew what was meant. There was discussion of what was on shortwave, but also the auxiliary bits about shortwave receivers and antennas and propagation. Someone would ask something, and get numerous replies, all going into depth about what was asked, not some idiot posting links to elsewhere that is now seen as content. People who weren't around back then cheer "RHF" because they don't know what it was like, don't know what RHF has driven off with his idiocy. In the absence of the good posters, of course RHF appears to be useful, but don't give him credit, ask where the good posters have gone. Since he's driven off the good posters, then he can appear as "king". Of course there was a period when there was transition, I remember some thread on something more technical, the Wadley loop or maybe synchronous detection, and the village idiot, another poster who abuses the newsgroup had to put in his two cents, completely irrelevant.

And the political drivel only came through cross-posting.

Then it started declining, which in itself wouldn't have been a bad idea. But instead, the political posts came. Most of the remaining "regulars" post all they want about political junk, they've even given up the pretense of pretending it's relevant because it's discussed on the radio. That includes the idiot RHF. Back when I thought there was still a chance of saving the newsgroup, RHF would whine if someone spanked him for being off topic, claiming the idiocy of "free speech". The idiots claiming that right virtually never know what they are talking about, they think it means talking about what they want where they want. They have killed free speech in this newsgroup, because the people who wanted to talk about shortwave listening have left, their right to "free speech" about listening to radio drowned out by the idiot "free speech" people who want to talk about politics, or even any topic but shortwave listening.

RHF is not knowledgeable. I remember when he was trying to control the newsgroup, by chastizing posters rather than being an example, and someone posted something about propagation, and RHF took him to task. The idiot was trying to decide what was on topic or not, yet didn't have the skill to know when someone was talking about something relevant.

So all the old posters are gone, leaving the idiots remaining. They see it as a hangout, so they post about whatever they like. There was a period when new people were still coming in, and I remember one idiot coming here and asking something relevant, then trying to fit in by posting something about movies. He had lousy examples, since the regulars were doing it. That was when there was still hope for the newsgroup, I chastized that idiot for posting off topic. Then later, when I posted about something related to AM DXing, the idiot came after me, since he was too clueless to know what the newsgroup was about, but thought the "shortwave" meant it was only about shortwave

You're as much an idiot as RHF if you think there's a need for a moderated newsgroup. Look what happened when you started a moderated newsgroup for amateur radio. Virtually no posts. The choice isn't moderated (which you love) or "anarchy" it's about running idiots like RHF out of town. We let him take over, initially we could have stomped him good but we let him do as he pleased, until it drove off the good posters and left a shallow and messy newsgroup.

There was a period of hope for this newsgroup, when the idiot RHF suddenly disappeared, a year or so ago. And some of us came back, briefly, though not initially since it seemed too likely that it was temporary. And it was, albeit a few months absence. Right away he was back to his usual posting habits.

There is no hope for this newsgroup until RHF leaves, or is slapped down hard enough that he doesn't reply to cross-posts, doesn't post off topic, doesn't constantly change subject headers, doesn't demean people by putting their names in subject headers, doesn't give approval to the "free speechers". doesn't automatically feel a need to reply to every post. Get him in line to actually form a proper post, I might take him more seriously if he made even that change. And get him to stop quoting a long post rather than simply quoting what's relevant. Another google-centric view, he is clueless that the rest of us have to scroll through the junk to see the actual reply, on google the quoting can be hidden.

Next time before you butt in here, do some proper research by actually reading the newsgroup for a reasonable length of time. After all, that used to be netiquette, "read the newsgroup for a reasonable time to get a feel for it before posting".

They do. Those roads, public utilities, parks, state budgets, federal budgets are paid mostly by income taxes, excise taxes, use taxes, gasoline taxes and some special use taxes. Are you under the impression that wealthy folks don't have to pay those?

Hmmmm, you do realize, one hopes, that their financial wealth is one of the things that provides for worker bees....like employment, pay, benefits, etc..

If you add a $1,000 tax to the $50,000 guy he becomes homeless
If you add a $1,000 tax to the $1,000,000 guy...he never notices it.

That's what's UNFAIR.

The EFFECT on the wealthy taxpayer is nil.
The EFFECT on the low income tax payer is catastrophic.

Sure it is. It gives a clear, concise and true picture of who pays the federal income tax burden in this country. If you want to talk about all taxes and all revenue that goes to the government then your right. I know of no place that compiles that data.

I assume you mean most Hispanics who are in the US. What the term means is Spanish speaking people or culture. It also means an American whose first language is Spanish.

Your mental disorder seems to be causing you to become obsessive on RHF, indeed, to the point of placing him in a villains' role.

We are now familiar with your opinion of RHF, what you find to be his short-comings, the fact you don't approve of his posting style, that you don't like him going off topic, your appraisal of his psychological "disorders", what you consider to have been his mistakes in posting, complaints about the "coverage area" of his posts -- i.e., AM/FM related posts, etc. I mean, your complaints, about RHF, are really too numerous to deal with.

In the end, it is like, I DON'T CARE! In the least, I find his sanity to be a better companion here than yours ...

Others mileage will vary ...

But you, your post(s) define you, someone I would not want for a neighbor, someone who looks like a person with many petty gripes and complaints, etc. I look at you and it makes me thankful for the neighbors, friends and family I have ... you just seem like a different flavor of a control freak who must have the order in your world , at all costs.

Setting up a proper receiver, antenna, listening station and the few and dwindling SW stations left, and their narrowing of coverage of subjects, are just not something which volumes and volumes can be written upon ... diversion is good for the mind ...

Besides the inherent unfairness of such a system what would you

Mexico does have a problem - a very serious one - with political corruption, as do many Latin American nations. Their history is rife with corrupt events that make ours look paltry by comparison. With this crap going on and the needs of the electorate ignored, can you blame them for wanting to leave? I have a co-worker of Brazilian ancestry, a great person and proud American BTW, who left because she was sick of the Brazilian corruption.

Interestingly, no one is asking that $50K guy for that extra grand, but here you are whining that the million dollar guy won't as affected.

The problem Democrats will have is that sometime they will run out of other people's money.

IOW, when buying a pack of gum at a Stop-N-Rob, you have to go through a check on your income so they know how much tax to charge?

C'mon, even you can't be that stupid.

Let's put it another way.......the cost of a system to do that would be a magnitude more cost than any resultant tax received. You don't think things through very far, do you. Typical Democrat, if we can find a way to stick it to some wealthy guy, we don't give a damn what it costs.

I'm perfectly familiar with a flat tax. The FairTax is a replacement for the income tax. It uses a flat 23% as the revenue generator.
Call it what you will, the FairTax is a winner.

Yeah, but in reality, what happens is, they attempt to leave the problems, not realizing they are part of them, this results in them transporting the problems to a new area ...

You see the above on a smaller scale when people leave the city to escape the problems and go to the smaller towns. They end up enacting the same ordinances, rules, laws, actions, styles, mindsets, etc. which caused all the problems in the first place! Soon, the place they left is no different that the place they are ...

Well, speaking only for my Brazilian co-worker - she's a great asset

Flat tax ... with exemptions for those who can't afford housing, food, medical, etc.

To my knowledge, except for the nutjobs, I'd believe the overwhelming number of posters have a radio and listen to it ... but then, perhaps I am naive ... still, I think that statement correct at this time.

You don't see data posted? What part aren't you grasping? From line

Percentiles Ranked by AGI: Top 1%
Percentage of Federal Personal Income Tax Paid: 38.02

John, this isn't rocket science.

Not sure about that since it has nothing to do with sales.

The FairTax is a replacement

Yes....and a flat tax is another method of figuring income tax.

It uses a flat 23% as the revenue generator.
> Call it what you will, the FairTax is a winner.

You may think so. I don't. I think it needs too many adjustments so that it does not become regressive.

A flat tax is on income. It replaces the current method of calculating income tax by applying the same tax rate to all income not just wages and salaries. I gave an example of it here in this thread. Did you take the time to read it? It is really quite simply and quite short so you should have no problem understanding it. ;)

What you proposed above is a sales tax and it sure as hell isn't flat. A flat sales tax would be the same percentage on whatever was purchased and no matter who purchased it.

You need to learn a bit more before you venture out into the real world.

Yeah, I can tell, you missed the whole point of the discussion, went full circle and are back on the limited range of tax -- income tax.

This ignores all other taxes including fines, fees, licenses, property tax, sales taxes, excise taxes, fuel taxes, cell phone taxes, electricity/water/sewer taxes, etc., etc., etc.

Then it isn't a flat tax. It would be a sales tax and one would have to prove exemptions or income with every purchase.

Here is how a flat tax on income would work....

You said:

> Truth is, sure looks like the wealthiest 1% are not paying 42% of all of > governments costs, and sure looks like the top 19% are not paying half > of governments costs, until that happens they are NOT paying their fair > share ... a flat tax can fix that ...

I replied:

Oh, you mean one like this?

A tax on ALL income no matter where derived. One deduction. Federal poverty level for a family of four and everybody gets that deduction.
Have a tax rate of, say 15% and the current poverty level at $24K and we get the following:

A person who earns up to $24K, pays nada...
A person who earns $50K, pays $3,900 (50-24x15%)
A person who earns $100K, pays $11,400 (100-24x15%)
A person who earns $500K, pays $71,400 (500-24x15%)
A person who earns a million pays $146,400 (1000-24x15%)

That do it for you?

Now that would be a flat tax on income. A flat tax on sales would be the same tax percentage applied to all purchases. Income is not a part of it, nor are deductions. So which flat tax are you arguing for? Income or sales?

I think the flat tax is great.

And, once implemented, all other taxes are dropped. These other taxes being drivers licenses, contracting licences, cell phone fees/charges (except for ACTUAL service charges) , property taxes, use taxes, excise taxes, fuel taxes, all other sales taxes, etc., etc.

Or, simply, ONE TAX PERIOD!

Even the morons will then realize what they actually pay in taxes (which is about 40% - 50% of their incomes, or more.)

JS

That's what is unfair.
A small increase of tax on a low earner is a huge burden
The same increase on a wealthy person is INSIGNIFICANT.

The problem began in the first place by people demanding cheap proces and businesses trying to find ways to do that.

Sure I do. The "flat tax" has the government deriving its revenue from the income tax. The FairTax is related because it is a flat sales tax that generates revenue from sales. It replaces the income tax as the method of funding government. If you fully understand the FairTax you will see exactly where I am coming from.

Yeah....and they both accomplish the same thing. The FairTax is better because a flat tax still involves taxing income which then leads to exemptions, deductions, and keeps the 16th amendment in place as well as the IRS, and I can go on and on about the pitfalls of our current tax system.

I don't think so, I know so. Tell me how this is regressive?

Current tax system:

Taxpayer earns $1000 a year.
IRS takes 25%: $250.
Taxpayer has $750 left to spend.

Taxpayer buys a new toaster for a FINAL total of $130.
Taxpayer has $620 left.

Fairtax system:

Taxpayer earns $1000 a year.
IRS takes 0%: $0
Taxpayer has $1000 left to spend
Taxpayer buys a new toaster for a FINAL total of $130.
Taxpayer has $870 left.

I'll go one better under the fairtax system.

Taxpayer earns $1000 a year.
IRS takes 0%: $0
Taxpayer has $1000 left to spend
Taxpayer buys a USED toaster for a total of $100.
Taxpayer pays NO fairtax sales tax.
Taxpayer has $900 left.

So, again, how is that regressive.

Three suggestions for you to find out why as well as any other questions you might have:

1) go visit fairtax.org and read it from front to back. Pay particular attention to the FAQ.
2) Buy and read "The FairTax Book" by Linder and Boortz.
3) Then buy and read "FairTax:The Truth: Answering the Critics"

It will all become crystal clear.

I didn't ignore it. In fact, I said that my analysis was based only on income and did not include all the things you just listed, nor was I aware of any place that does. Apparently, you can't find it either. What also did say is that the wealthy also pay on every one of those items you just listed. Again, you want to turn this in to a "what percentage of ones income they pay" as opposed to "who really foots the bill". What is undeniable is that for FEDERAL INCOME TAXES, which are the primary basis of funding for the federal government, the wealthy carry the load. It can not be disputed.

Everyone paying their fair share, this is how the discussion began, or, basically, everyone being equally taxed.

Of course, even with a flat tax certain safeguards would have to be in place from preventing criminals from crimes which would allow them to ignore the taxes. For example, a case where they made their dollars here and bought only foreign goods in mexico or canada ... it is a given, as soon as any fix, situation, solution, etc. is enacted, the criminals will come crawling out from under their rocks attempting to avoid it ... some of these safeguards to prevent this will have to be worked out as we catch the criminals ...

Unfortunately, every discussion must begin on the premise that everyone is capable of realizing "common sense."

At the bottom of the fair tax or fair tax is the real intent and sole purpose that all contribute equally and in direct relationship to how much they profit from business here.

JS

The Virginian-Pilot
ï¿½ May 15, 2011

Who really pays the baker's taxes? The baker may write the check, but he does not bear the cost, and in that paradox lies the cause of much of the bitter partisanship and polarization that poisons our political process. But to understand that problem, we must consider how taxes are applied to the production of goods and services.

So, how does the loaf of bread the baker sells come to market?

A farmer grew and harvested wheat for sale to the miller to be made into flour for the baker. The farmer paid income taxes based on his profit from the sale and property tax on his farm and equipment. Those taxes were, from his point of view, just another cost of doing business in the course of earning his living, no different from fuel for his tractor or wages and taxes for employees.

Since every other farmer had roughly the same expenses and taxes, the price they charge the miller must cover their expenses and taxes, plus their after-tax disposable income and savings. Otherwise, there would be no point in growing wheat. All of these costs and taxes were passed on to the miller, embedded in the price of wheat.

Likewise, when the miller sold the flour ground from the wheat to the baker, his taxes, plus the income and Social Security taxes he withheld from his employees, plus the farmer's taxes, were all passed on to the baker.

The baker then sold his bread made from the flour, carrying with it his own taxes plus those of his employees, plus all those previous taxes from the farmer, miller and their employees, hidden in the price of that loaf of bread. The buyer and his family ate the bread, and, having done so, could not sell it to anyone else and pass the taxes along, as the baker and everyone else before had done.

So, it is the consumer who paid the baker's taxes, along with the farmer's taxes, the miller's taxes and the taxes they withheld from all of their employees. From bread to automobiles to brain surgery, the price of everything we buy carries in it the hidden taxes of everyone who contributed to the production of that product or service to the tune of, on average, 23 cents of every dollar we spend for federal taxes alone.

Our complex, pervasive and expensive tax code is, in reality, a scheme to draft businesses and individuals as unpaid and unknowing tax collectors to gather a hidden sales tax and to keep voters from realizing who really bears the burden of those high taxes.

There is no way around this central reality that all income and business taxes are a deception and that all taxes are eventually paid by the consumer, hidden in the price of goods and services. It doesn't matter what tax rate is applied to which tax bracket, or what deductions you receive. These devices change only the degree to which you are a tax collector, but the burden taxes place on your life depends solely on what you spend.

Paying this hidden consumption tax is unavoidable, but the illusion of income-based taxing does a great deal of harm. First, it distorts our economic decisions. Goods and services that are provided by highly taxed individuals and companies, like health care, are artificially more expensive than necessary, while raw materials and natural resources are underpriced, leading to overconsumption and waste.

But even worse, these hidden taxes distort the political process, encouraging government overspending by politicians who exploit the mistaken belief of many voters that government spending can be paid for solely by taxing corporations or the "rich." All of the exploitation of envy and demagoguery - which brings so much ill will to our politics and drives wedges between Americans who would be better served by mutual respect and compassion - is ultimately the meaningless exploitation of a lie.

Our income tax system, with its escalating marginal rates, appears progressive, but the reality is extremely regressive. Currently, the lower income 45 percent of wage earners may pay no income tax directly, but in reality, with their FICA taxes added to the hidden embedded tax, their true federal tax burden is almost 30 percent of their meager income.

Voters might well choose differently were they aware that government spending is ultimately paid for by everyone, through an invisible sales tax disguised as a high cost of living.

It might be possible to implement - in a totalitarian state. The government would have to always know what your worth (in terms of wealth) is at all times, and exactly what you purchase throughout the year, and when.

Yikes.

I suspect that such a system would encourage a black market or two.

Maybe so, but Camping was smart enough to find people stupid enough to donate 18.3 million dollars to his "church" last year.

They interviewed one of his acolytes on the radio and she said she was sitting in her back yard, praying for the end of the world because she had money troubles.

Possibly her "money troubles" would not have been quite so bad if she hadn't given her money to that quack.

Once again to paraphrase H. L. Mencken, "You'll never go broke underestimating the stupidity of the American public". Camping obviously took that advice to heart.

You chose the easy point of my post to reply to.

The point you ignored is that your suggested system - "Let me put this more bluntly. If I buy and item and pay 7% sales tax, the top one percent should buy an item and pay a 42.7% sales tax, that way they will be contributing their fair share to run government ..." - is either impossible to implement, or requires a dictatorship.

Yes, that is a fair system, you simply want to take it literally and say it doesn't work. I am not stuck on any particular system to implement it with. Any system which can demonstrate that it can successfully accomplish the goal, and costing the least, would be great.

Any system only needs to manage that 1% of those with control of 42.7% of the financial money pay 42.7% of the sales taxes. And that 20% at the top pay 50.3% of the taxes.

I simply gave a simplified version of what is to be accomplished. Those with any common sense would have realized it was over simplified ...

Yes, I took it literally. That is, I assumed that you were serious.

Well, I do give a damn. The system must be workable, fair, and implementable in a free country.

Mao Tse Tung did not acquire person wealth as the world leader of the Chinese people. And when Gorbechev gave the treasuries of the people of the USSR to 40 oligarchial Capitalist families, before that there were were no millioniares in the USSR; that is even after 30 years of phony State Capitalism. No systems have ever been so equal. Now CEOs in the United Snakes makes 431 times of the average employee, if you can get work. China is a sweatshop for the United States.

I see terminology such as "Fair" tax and "Flat" tax.
Those terms are pure and unadulterated bullshit.

In addition, any form of consumption tax is regressive and unfair to everyone Unfair to the poor because the tax is excessive to them to the extent that they cannot purchase necessary items because of the tax.
Unfair to wealthy since a consumption tax inhibit purchasers and therefore affects industry.

A progressive tax on income no matter what the source and an effective inheritance tax are the fairest kind of taxation.

We've had them for many years and they worked.

Over the years they have been corrupted by special interests.

They should be restored.

Yep, and since they seem to pay a higher rate for what they get than people who get less, then it seems that to be perfectly fair they should be getting a tax cut rather than a tax raise as some are suggesting.

Sorry, but according to the numbers posted, they pay quite a bit of taxes.

Really? Why should they pay a higher sales tax than you for the same item?

Seems you aren't asking that they pay "their fair share" but an excessive share.

Oh, flat tax, then they should pay 7% tax just like EVERYONE ELSE....not the 42.7% you asserted they should be paying.

What's more fair than that?

Same product, same taxes paid.

Fair.

You say flat tax, and then turn right around and make it an unflat tax.

You need to make up your mind which it's going to be. Flat or not.

I don't see it. If they get more than poor people do, it is fair that they should pay more than poor people do (not necessarily relational to the tax, but relational to the benefits).

But taxes aren't about fairness, other than too much perceived unfairness can have results that the state would consider negative.
Taxes are about getting money.

As with Willie Sutton and robbing banks - "That's where the money is".

Of course if the state really wants to optimize income, then it is best off with a large tax-paying middle class.

Agreed. A flat tax. Mr A buys a product he pays the same tax as Mr. B.

Mr. A pays the same rate of taxes on his income that Mr. B does.

No exceptions, no exclusions, except those which apply to ALL.

If you're going to exempt Mr. A housing, food, medical, then Mr B gets the exact same exemptions.

Otherwise, it's not a flat tax.

Space isn't flat, why should tax be?

The Horrifying obviousness of the truth is that nothing short of a National Sales tax, Energy Consumption Tax, or farcically named VAT will make any difference whatsoever at this point
-- it's too late to change the world with dreams and talk.

To add a $1,000 to the $50,000 guy's taxes he's going to have to be making $6,666 more thus he will now be a $56,666 guy and will after taxes still have an additional $5,666 thus not only doesn't become homeless, but can remodel a room.

Meanwhile the $1,000,000 guy will also be making $6,666 more and thus will now be a $1,006,666 guy and will after taxes still have an additional $5,666.....

Exactly the same as the other guy.

So what's unfair about it?

Except the increase in income on the low earner is also huge, and the same increase in income on the wealthy person is insignificant.

To put that another way, for the low earner to have to pay an additional $1,000 in taxes his income would increase by over 13%. For the wealthy individual to pay an additional $1,000 in taxes his income would increase by only 0.6%

(per your numbers for gross income)

Sure, the tax is more significant for the low wage earner, but then so is the increase in his income.

You have to look at BOTH side of the equation, not just one side.

You are in effect, trying to compare Apples to Oranges.

But I can show who was in control of the House, Senate and Presidency when the debt was generated.

Republicans added massive debt when they were in control of the House,
Senate and/or Presidency.
Democrats added massive debt when they were in control of the House, Senate and/or Presidency.

The spreadsheet runs all the way back to the G. Washington and the debt the nation had when he entered office.

Would you care for me to email you the spreadsheet?

Prove space isn't flat.

You do understand what a "theory" is, right?

I see, so we don't want to be fair in our taxation, just get it any way we

So rob from the rich?

At least you're not claiming to be fair, and you're admitting it's robbery.

Looks like the freemasons(Knights Templar)were in control of Russia for a looong time.

"The Fair Tax" (http://www.fairtax.org/site/PageServer?pagename=about_main) is an illusion.

It's unrealistic bullshit with a catchy label.

It's a consumption tax that falls most heavily on lower income people and HARMS the retail sector of the economy, the 70% part of our economy.

Our progressive income tax, less the holes that have been punched in it by special interests the years, is fairest tax of all.

Much worse than that ...

A few of us realize that for things to get better, we first have to do the proper things to make them better ... we also see that nothing is being done along those lines ...

What ? ? ? Knights Templar were destryed by the Church several centuries before Russia became anything closely resembling a single-unified powerful state . Freemasons are not exactly a religious monastic order , but rather a secret society out of many that existed in Western Europe in the 18th and especially 19th century . Freemasons were outlawed in many countries sporadically and Imperial Russia certainly was one of them . The Bolsheviks annihilated anyone they considered as a threat ,especially the Freemasons . And that's the way it was back in those times .

Got news for you Einstein. You have to bring in over $5800 for any of your income to be taxed. The deductibles are as follows:

$5,800 for unmarried taxpayers or married taxpayers filing separately, $11,600 for married taxpayers filing jointly, and $8,500 for taxpayers filing as head of household.
The additional standard deduction allowed for blind taxpayers and senior citizens will be $1,150 if married filing jointly and $1,450 if single.

And just how do you expect those in retail to determine how much to tax any individual? Are you suggesting that everyone carry some special "rich guy" card around to show so they can get raped at the cashier? Or maybe create a grand database and require everyone in retail to subscribe to it thus allowing them to know more about you than most people care to share?

How about you just make everyone with over a $250,000 income sew a big gold dollar sign on their clothing so they'll be easier to spot and round up to put on the trains to the camps?

Furthermore, your insane notion that I should pay over 42 cents on the dollar for any and all purchases I make simply because I am skilled and lucky enough to get a considerably larger paycheck than you do sounds more like typical class envy crap than anyhing that can be called "fair".

Where did you come up with 42.7% as being "fair"?
Are you simply figuring on that percentage leveling the playing field to the point that no one will make anymore than the lowest paid in the country? That might make you feel all warm and fuzzy but at the same time it would dramatically decrease any drive or desire for anyone to actually be successful in any field. Who the hell wants to go to college and spend all that it takes to get a degree and go out and get a $100,000 or $200,000 a year paycheck when they could save their tuition and go get a job making tires and be able to keep the same $50,000 or so a year without worrying about giving half or more to the government?

Tell you what hotshot. I'll put up how much in income, sales, excise, property et al in taxes that I pay in a given year against what you pay in total and just see how "fair" it comes out to be in reality.

Uncle Sam is already getting a quarter of my taxable income on top of the state, city and county getting another 10 to 15 percent in property, sales and other taxes.

Yours is the typical "I know how much anyone really needs to live on" better than anyone else bullshit.

But go ahead. Place a ridiculous sales tax on the items that the people you perceive as being wealthy purchase and watch your neighbors and friends and family suddenly wondering why they're getting laid off due to slow downs in sales of big ticket items that a lot of them get paid to make.
Sure, the wealthy will continue to purchase the items that they really really want, but a lot of us aren't going to be jumping on a $10,000 item that will end up costing over $14,000 after sales tax alone.
That's not how we managed to have anything in the bank in the first place.
If your scheme were in place now then GM would have lost one sale that I know of as I will not pay no $57,000 for the truck that has a $40,000 price tag on it just so you don't have to pay a dime. They likely would have lost a shitload of sales as a result of such a tax scheme.

You only see how such a scheme will benefit yourself and not how it would affect anyone or anything else.
Such tunnelvision typically results in more harm than good in any circumstance.

BTW, since your scheme is supposed to be an exercise in perfection, can you tell us just what nations in the world have anything similar that has been a boost to their economies or improved the quality of life of the lowest income earners as a result?
Since you see the plan as an example of pure genius then it should be no problem at all for you to show us where in the world it has worked.

Lastly, your "fair tax" would not eliminate the federal income tax nor would it eliminate state income taxes or any of the other municipal, county and state taxes.
So your so called "fair tax" would simply be just another big money grab and all of the horseshit predictions about it increasing consumption and GDP etc is a load of pure crap.

Although I have had talks with several big name accountants, they all are in the ballpark of that being a 35-45% tax on those dollars ... just to support the current level of government spending ... you would have to pay more if they were to pay down debt while holding the same level of spending ...

There's no such thing as fairness when taking money by gunpoint. So the problem for the state is in how to get the most revenue with the least risk - and the best government does this for the long term, the worst do it for the short term.

Are you implying that a proportional tax system isn't robbery? It's all robbery. It may be necessary and useful robbery - but it's robbery nevertheless.

Not exactly true. If your tax dollars didn't pay for the military, you would now be speaking another language and, most probably, under the rule of some dictator to royal family ... I wouldn't call that part robbery ...

A socialist revolution overthrows the capitalist system. It establishes the system of political rule of the working class: the dictatorship of the proletariat, --the proletariat together with its allies making up the great majority of society, begins to tansform society. Socialist revolution creates an economy based on social ownership and meeting social need.

Taxing income is wrong anyway. You are stealing the fruit of ones labor, like a lord of the old days taking 20% of your harvest. Yer a pinko.

No tax on income. Tax imports, outsourced jobs and Democrats.

LOL, as always, you're delusional. All the old USSR/China system did was create a few "leaders" like Mao, etc, at the top and a whole nation of miserable people. Why the hell do you think they wouldn't let people leave? Because they wouldn't come back.

ROFLOL

And, the taxes are added to the cost of the goods, you still pay them
... what an imbecile!

But, I see what you are saying, as long as you don't realize it is a tax, you will pay it in ignorance ... good luck, dummy ...

How they spend the money doesn't change how they get it. The Mafia calls it "protection", and model themselves after the Romans.

Saying it's not robbery for stuff you want it spent upon and it is robbery on stuff others want it spent on doesn't work.

The socialist revolutions in the Soviet Union (1917-1956) and China (1949-1976) made tremendous advances towards a liberated world. With state power in their hands, the former have-nots were taking hold of and transforming society. The rule of profit and exploitation was ended. Basic social needs were met. Life expectancy in Maoist China doubled between 1949 and 1976, from 32 years to 65 years.
Unprecedented strides were made in uprooting hte oppression of owmen and minority nationalities. These revolutions did not fail but were defeated by bourgeois and reactionary forces.

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

Not theory.
Experimental fact without which GPS satellites would not keep the correct time.

http://imagine.gsfc.nasa.gov/docs/ask_astro/answers/970610.html

What evidence is there that supports the theory of curved space? What does General Relativity predict about the shape of space-time near a large mass (eg, a star)?

The Answer
There has been experimental evidence for the curvature of spacetime by a massive object since the early part of this century (1922), when observers set out to test the predictions of general relativity. During a solar eclipse, they realized, the light from stars in the same general area of the sky as the Sun are visible during the day. If light from these stars is affected by the curvature of spacetime due to the Sun's mass, then this would be measurable as a deflection (or a change in location) of the star's position on the sky. The stars closer to the position of the Sun in the sky would suffer a larger deflection; in general the deflection would be proportion to the stars distance from the Sun's location on the sky. This effect was observed for 15 stars during the solar eclipse of 1922 in Western Australia, and was interpreted as observational verification of the predictions of general relativity. General relativity predicts that spherical masses deform spacetime in much the same way a lead ball would deform the surface of a rubber sheet. It is this deformation that causes the planets to orbit the Sun, and the Moon to orbit the Earth. In fact, all orbital motion is the result of bodies being affected by the curvature of the spacetime in which they move.

You must be confusing too many events and trying to bring nearly everything to the lowest common denominator . Left and especially the right wing of the SR party was wiped out in 1918 by the bolsheviks .
Now China ,while following in the footsteps of the Russian Experiment went much further . During ' The Great Leap ' they literally starved the farmers by the millions . Are you related to Pol Pot ?

No, he would not have been a citizen had he been born abroad (which he very well may have been.) The McCarran Walter Act, aka the Immigration and Naturalization Act of 1952, specified in Title III, Ch. 1, Sec. 301(a):

The following shall be citizens and nationals of the United State at birth:

(7) a person born outside the geographical limits of the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a citizen of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than ten years, at least five of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years

Hussein's one citizen parent was only 18 at the time of his birth, which means she arithmetically could not have met the physical presence requirement. Had he been born abroad, he would not have been born a citizen. As he may very well have been born abroad, and never naturalized, then he may not be a citizen at all.

Yea, but the perception of fairness tends to reduce the risk. Some are suggesting we utterly ignore any attempt at fairness and simply steal all we can.

Sorry, but you're attempting to prove curvature by measuring something else.
It's entirely within the realm of possibility that relativity has nothing to do with "curved space" and is simply an "optical illusion" on the part of the observer.

Much like a man might claim that a mirage is real, even though in reality it's just an illusion created by other forces.

Both revolutions and civil wars and subsequent struggles were awsome affairs involving tens of millions of people in far reaching struggle and historically unheard of change. In China the Maoists did not starve the Chinese people, in fact, starvation was a season occurances for the history of China, including when the British and Imperialist were running China with their puppet feudal Chinese landlords. Because of Socialism China ended it season cycles of starvation. The straight talk on Pol Pot was that the United States wiped out the society there with mass bombing, and the US even invaded with troops, so much of the blame must be laid on Uncle Sam for wiping out society in Cambodia, and this greatly influenced the Khmer Rouge; it was not simply the killing of 400,000 people with out historical context.

They are one in the same the Knights Templar were soldiers of fortune,sun worshippers,those those that refused to leave , hid under the guise of European masons,they became the jesuits,that infiltrated all governments and are in control of all religions,better know as the FreeMasons because they set up shop in the New World and formed a government,that declared freedom of religon as there number one priority so they would not be driven off their land anymore because of their worship.It is written by them in their Constitution of The USA,which was dierctly fashioned after the Masons creed!

They keep the deception going,by not allowing it taught in the schools and out of the media.To go against their Supreme Law of the Land used to be called treason,

I can remember back when I mentioned I thought it was a stupid waiste of Tax Dollors to spend soo much money on a new arena for sporting events and a foriegn lookinng shill said"I just might look like I'm not from around her,but I was born here and I think the money was well spent because I love basket-ball.

Now thats better than Seinfeld

"Nothing is being done" to make things better?

Sorry, looks like you are wrong again...

How quickly you forgot about the improvements to the health care system. Millions of people previously without health care now have more than their previous choices of either overloading the ER or being put out on the curb to die.

How quickly you forgot the two saved auto companies and tens of thousands of jobs that were saved. Both GM and Chrysler paid back most of their debt to the government...and today GM is going to announce 1000-2000 new jobs. (So much for those turkeys that whined about the bailouts.)

But hey, if you call those "nothing", this is America, you are entitled to your opinion. Heck, you're even entitled to be a kooktard troll.

- Well most Hispanics are Mexicans.

nah,,, Nah... NAH ! ! !

Latin America has roughly 300M Hispanics excluding 190M Brazilians.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/List_of_Latin_American_countries_by_population

Mexico has the largest Hispanic Population with 112M about 1/3rd of the Hispanics living in Latin America -but- 1/3rd is NOT the Majority.

FWIW : The USA has a Hispanic Population of ~48M : Making the USA #2 : 2nd to Mexico http://www.infoplease.com/spot/hhmcensus1.html
http://hispanic.com/topics/hispanicpopulation.aspx

That 48M US Hispanics is larger than the 33M
Canadians; and Canada has a small Hispanic Population of just around 300K.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Latin_American_Canadian That's about the Population of Pittsburgh, PA

This is not 1940; and the move from Monrovia, move in the Hispanic direction :

Since California and San Bernardino are Hispanic Words {Place Names} NOT English.

Plenty of Lily-White Redheaded and Blond Hispanics including Mexicans; even some with Freckles.

OBTW : Des Plaines [IL] Is a French Word

FP, you may want to go back and clarify just who and what you are responding to. I never suggested any 42% tax on anyone, John Smith did. I did suggest the FairTax, which is significantly different than what John Smith has been writing about. When you are ready to debate the merits of the FairTax, which assumes you understand what it is, then let's talk. First, you need to distinguish between what I propose and what Smith propose.

Agreed. But perceptions vary. Certainly there isn't much agreement about what "fair" means here.

The results of having the wealthy believe that their taxes being unfair could be with them moving their investments offshore or buying off politicians. But those are what people are complaining about now
- would they be any worse with Reagan era taxes? It is not obvious that this is the case.

Some "social engineering" taxes are better than others. For instance, if tax breaks were made for investing within our country resulted in more middle-class paying taxes, the country might find tax revenue increasing. Those who don't want the rich to have any tax breaks can be hurting themselves here - but perception matters.

That seems better to me than giving tax breaks to Oil companies, as there is danger in being dependent upon oil-supplying countries. There is a long history of giving breaks to companies that produce products that we need for national security, and taxing products that give our enemies strength.

It is perceived as a train of impulses. Humans have no problem sensing

In a time when life is evermore difficult, and the world has become not only more complex, but dangerous, the promise of paradise is attractive to those without the resources to withstand tough times.

And as we continue to dumb down the population, there will be a virtually inexhaustable supply of fools taken in by these charlatans.

Doggy doesn't hear that HAARP machine crankin up either.

Isn't there some kind of ELF (Extreme Low Frequency) receiver available that can be used for listening to the Earth? I think Art Bell or George Noory used to advertize such a device.

U.S.Military has something like that for transmitting/receiving signals.

The World didn't end yesterday, will not end today, maybe tomorrow.

Free Masons vs Slave Masons

As in free "stone mason".
(and as in free "architect")
Dating back to ancient Egypt
(and the "Ben-Ben Stone") and probably before that.

Infiltration of Free Masons/Lodges
Yes.
Infiltration of "The Church"
Yes.
Infiltration of all major religious organizations.
Yes.
Infiltration of government.
Yes.
Infiltration of military.
Yes.
Infiltration of intelligence agencies.
Yes.
Infiltration of law enforcement agencies.
Yes.

But enough about the present.

We probaby need somewhere between 25 and 50 million jobs ... when they start creating millions of jobs a year, you are going to see some kind of improvement ... until the "improvement" is meaningful, don't even wake me up!

A bandaid on a bullet wound might be an improvement, if the patient dies, it wasn't enough of one ...

WOW, great news for the chinese sweat shops!

Now the employees can work longer and endure worse conditions, thanks to their increased longevity! Support the company store, enjoy living in the company housing. Enjoying such a low wage that they must going on enduring the poor working conditions, etc.

WAS GREAT!

NOT!

Oh, come on - doesn't this sound just a little hyperbolic, even to you? This 50 million figure is enough jobs for every American PLUS every illegal immigrant including the kids. We have NEVER had employment levels like that - nor will we until we have unprecedented demand for the goods and services those jobs would produce.

There are 350 million+ citizens, there are millions of illegal aliens. The top of the bell curve of the population numbers lands right in the employable years ...

We need MILLIONS of jobs. 2000 jobs in my city alone would not even be noticed ...

No one is asking for the same increase from both parties, you idiot.
Besides if the low earner is really a low earner like the 45% who don't pay tax in the first place, how can you increase the tax on them. They still won't reach the AGI that pays taxes. Increasing the tax percentage doesn't do a damn thing to change their AGI.

Yep....at a flat rate for everybody.

The FairTax is related because it is a flat sales

Then to keep it from becoming regressive you must drop that sales tax from certain items, like food, housing, public transportation, gasoline, etc.. or you end up with the poor paying a much larger percentage of their income on those taxes than the wealthy.

A flat tax on income replaces the current tax system. If properly administered it only has ONE deduction and that is poverty level wages for a family of four. Everyone gets that ONE deduction, or exemption if you prefer, and no other. You can do your tax on a postcard.

Same taxpayer......buys $100 worth of groceries.....pays $123 for them.
Rich guy, he eats the same, so he buys a $100 worth of groceries...pays $123 for them. Which one spent the bigger percentage of their income on a necessity? OK, let's fix it....we will not pay that tax on groceries....oooops, you just generated an exception.

I am familiar with sales tax schemes, they have been around for years.
With exemptions, they become just as convoluted as the current system.
Excise luxury taxes were another attempt to soak the rich as poor poeple would never buy luxury taxed items. How did that work out?

Just how is your fair tax different from your scenarios above. After all, you said folks would by only foreign goods from outside the US which avoids your fair tax.

Or a person earns $50K and is taxed 15% on amount over federal poverty level. Another person earns $500K and is taxed 15% on amount over federal poverty level. Same percentage on taxable income paid. Fair.

The big problem with sales taxes is what is taxed. How about food or necessities? Food stamps? Now you begin to list exemptions....and the list goes on......Thanks, Sonny and Cher......

Those are sales or use taxes and are paid regardless of income, ergo, they are regressive in nature and do not fall on the rich as much as they do on the poor. However, there is really no way to fix that based on income which is what you are trying to do.

Your statement explains China under Capitalism today. During the revolutionary period Mao was dealing with the problem of a new bourgeois elite emerging within the Communist Party who wanted to bring back capitalism. He called on people to rise up against oppressive leaders and political structures. The Cultural Revolution engaged hundreds of millions of people in far-reaching struggle and historically unheard of change. Workers and peasants were debating questions of the direction of society, criticizing out of touch officials, foreign more participatory forms of management and administration, and entering into realms of science and culture. The Cultural Revolution had coherent and liberating goals: to prevent the restoration of capitalism; to revolutionize the institutions of society, including the Communist Party; to break down the divisions between mental and manual labor and between urban and rural areas: to challenge old ways of thinking--in short to carry forward and deepen socialist revolution. When Mao died, there was a coup de etat, in which 50,000 men carrying axes came out and restored Capitalism by force. Mao's own wife, a revolutionary heroine, was declared one of the "Gang of Four" and she later died in prison. Today China suffers under Capitalism and people in the countryside drink insecticide to try and escape the harsh Capitalist conditions, prostitution is rampant (there was no prostitution during Mao's time) and there are elites driving Ferraris. China was the height of human achievement and cooperation during the Revolutionary period. The World needs Communism.

I assume you mean Fair Tax, since that is the proposal to get all taxes from sales or use. The term in common use today for flat tax is on income.

Yep, and that means that the wealthy and the poor pay the same taxes rather than the wealthy paying more. Do you know what problem you are trying to fix? According to your statements, it is to get the wealthy to pay more. There is no way to do that with a sales or use tax.

Mexican rotten problem goes back to the Spanish colonialism era and still ruled by the Spanish at the top and non-white mestizo are at the bottom. Most Mexicans Mestizo mixed gene are brought by the Spanish's Corte Army who tainted with Moorish and Arab gene which is why most Mexicans look more like Arab than North American native.

And it won't fix the problem he is whining about....which is the rich not paying a hundred times what the poor do.

THINK for a change, John. How would a system like that have to work?
How would a merchant know whether to charge 7% sales tax or 42% sales tax

As does the FairTax. Best part is the consumer pays it only when they buy something. They decide when to pay it, not when the government decides you owe it on payday.

Nope, There are two reasons why it's not regressive. First, people pay no net FairTax at all up to the poverty level. Every household receives a rebate that is equal to the FairTax paid on essential goods and services. Second, per my example an item that costs $100 today still costs $100 under the FairTax. If that's regressive then sign me up.

The poor are always going to pay a larger percentage of their income on everything. No tax system is going to change that. Isn't that what the bulk of this thread is about?

Under the FairTax you don't have to worry about deductions or exemptions. You don't even have to do your taxes on a postcard because there is nothing to do. April 15 would be just another beautiful spring day.

Here's the problem with the flat tax, it retains the invasive income tax administration apparatus and can easily revert to a graduated, convoluted mess, as it has many times over many years. In addition, a large part of the burden of the flat tax -- the business tax -- will remain hidden from people in the retail price of goods and services.
Under a flat tax, individuals would still file an income tax return each year. Postcard or not, it's still a return. While this is a simple postcard, the record keeping requirement is still there. Under the FairTax, individuals never file a tax return again, ever! Under the flat tax, the payroll tax would be retained and income tax withholding would still be with us. Under the FairTax, the payroll tax, which is a larger and more regressive tax burden for most Americans than is the income tax, is repealed. Under the FairTax, what you earn is what you keep. No more withholding taxes; no more income tax.

Stop right there. That's incorrect. Under the FairTax the $100 of groceries will still cost $100. There's no need to even go any further with your example.

You may be familiar with sales tax schemes, but it's clear you aren't familiar with the FairTax. Instead of speculating as you have done above why not go visit the site and base your criticisms on the plan itself? You will find that many of the things you raised above are answered there.

Look, I'm with you that a flat tax would be better than the current system. Problem is that it, as opposed to something like the FairTax, leaves itself open to far more manipulation than the FairTax. The tax code itself is evidence of just that.

Perhaps it you paid some attention to what it would take to implement such a system and what it would cost in freedom, etc.. then perhaps folks wouldn't be so hard on you. Instead you simply seem to wish to deal on emotion.

Which has what to do with illegal immigration? Nothing. The cheap products (I really typoed that one) and businesses trying to find a way to produce those cheap products were the cause of most illegal immigration today.

I gave an example of how the same number (dollars) has a different affect on people of different wealth.
You didnï¿½t understand it.....what's the word you used....you idiot!

More nonsense.
We have a system that was god when it started and has been eroded over the years.
It was sound.
It can be made sound again without phony "fair" tax and "flat" tax nonsense Fix it.

The real problem is...

First you have to decide how much the government needs to funtion.

To do that you have to decide what the government should be doing.

I think rather than discussing camoflaging how the feds fleece the taxpayer those questions really need to be answered.

I am of the opinion that taxes overall hurt the economy by taking people's hard earned money. I don't care if you are the bus boy or the owner of the chain. You earened it, it's yours.

Overall if the bite is reasonably low than whatever negative effects it has are mitigated. But the only really effective way to increase government revenues is to have a going, expanding economy. That way whatever "protection" money the government extorts from the people can increase without increasing the percentage that it takes.

Of course that would require a complete ovrehaul of most federal policies and the expulsion of Marxists and enviromentalists.

One would have to stop viewing tax policy as a method of molding people's behavior and relegate to the neccessary evil it is.

Frankly I have yet to hear anyone explain to me how we can tax out way out of the current crisis wherein the debt equals the GDP and is likely to double in 8 years. There is simply no possible way to do it without removing so much wealth from the private sector as to thorougly tank the economy, which will in turn make the problem immeasurably worse.

The truth of this must be recognized and those that ignore the question should in turn be ignored. They are greedy, twisted people that want to punish the successful, get thier government cheese and then ignore the calamity for our children and grand children. And us. They imagine somehow the beast will continue feeding enough to support them, in spite of what the vampirism does to the country as a whole.

Desperation or dumbness...that is the question.

Latest "dumb" (gullible, desperate?) report from Yahoo News:

A woman, believing Camping that the end of the world was near, and not wanting her daughters to suffer, put both of them on the bed and slashed their throats with a box-cutter and then did the same to herself.

All three survived, the mom to be arrested.

Never underestimate the depths of human gullibility. :-(

I have no real problem with a "luxury" tax, too.
Cell Phones for instance? Noop
Cell phones with camera's all the "apps?" Yup.
Basic 19" TV's? Noop.
Large screen LED/LCD things that cover an entire wall? Yup.
Chevy's? Noop. They are already sorry for buying them.
Cadillac's, BMW's, Mercedes' and the like? Yup.

I fail to see anything in there about income levels determing anything.

I looked at the prebate schedule. Where in there does income come into it for that poverty level? From what I see, it is based on number of adults and number of dependents.

Second, per my example an item that costs $100 today

Not on a flat tax like I proposed. The difference is slight, depending on your income, but it is there.

And your fair tax needs to know number of adults in the household along with number of dependents. There is also nothing there that prevents it from becoming another convoluted mess. Congress can fuck up a bowling ball.

In addition, a

This is an interesting point since there are supposedly intelligent folks in this newsgroup that don't understand that all businesses end up passing all their costs to the consumer in the price of the product or service. If they don't, after awhile they go under.

Federally, that could be true, however, when looking at state and local taxes, it is bullshit.

Yep.

No, actually, it isn't. It is simply placed in the Fair Tax.

Under the FairTax, what

Just more taxes on the point of sale while all taxes from state and local governments remains intact.

I was speaking of the actual worth of the product. Yes, there are business taxes, etc.. in there but one cannot generate a new tax without adding to what is already there. So a product which today costs $100 plus city and state sales taxes will now cost the difference between the 23% sales tax and the old taxes on the product plus city and state sales taxes. What you have done is taken the taxes previously included the product price and moved them into your Fair Tax in addition to the hit on that tax replacing federal income taxes and FICA.

Indeed I do understand.
What's that got to do with a luxury tax?

> I fail to see anything in there about income levels determing anything.

I wasn't talking about income levels.

I was talking more about a "fair sales Luxury tax", that keeps, or rather helps keep in check, the "truly poor" from buying said items whilst they are on welfare and food stamps, like they do now as they fool the system.

Most wealthy people could care less what they pay for anything.
They already want and buy the biggest and baddest, and buy the first models and prototypes just because it's there!
THEY bring the costs down when they finally go into major production!

Cost means NOTHING to them!

But poor slobs don't need, nor want them, until the items or tech becomes more afforable.

Again, thank us, the rich that bring these items to the masses at a lower cost, to the poor!

So again, don't tax our (the rich) incomes, tax SAID ITEMS that even the poor choose to buy, instead of the food they need.

Yeah, only in Liberal NYC WABC's station. How shocking, after the 2012 elections, liberals go back to listening to Air America,, oh wait.

Radio ratings fall for Limbaugh, Hannity

WABC's top talkers see big declines.

By Matthew Flamm

Right-wing talk radio may have worn out its welcome, at least for now. The just-out April Arbitron report shows Rush Limbaugh and Sean Hannity-the biggest conservative talkers in New York-stuck in a ratings slump that started back in November, right after the 2010 midterm elections.

Top-rated Mr. Limbaugh has taken the biggest fall.

He had a 3.0 share of listeners for his WABC-AM midday slot-a 33% slide from October and from last April.

My flat tax does that. Fair Tax (or a sales tax) does not.

That would be true regardless of the taxing system.

Oh, we can define what is fair, if we simply make it less "personal".

For example;

Is it fair to charge Mr A the rate of 32.6% income tax on his income but charge Mr. B at a rate of 27.4% income tax on his income?

The overwhelming answer is they should both pay the same rate of tax on their income.

It's only when you engage in making class, race, ethnic, etc a factor that what is "fair" becomes controlled by extraneous factors resulting from bias and discrimination rather than any object view of what is "fair".

> The results of having the wealthy believe that their taxes being

Which means less revenue for the government, in the long run.

> But those are what people are complaining about now
> - would they be any worse with Reagan era taxes? It is not obvious > that this is the case.

Well, see in the Reagan era we hadn't established the "global economy" and people still tended to "invest in America". now the blinders have been removed, and investment abroad is seen as not only a perfectly valid undertaking, but quite viable, profitable, and thus a better investment.

> Some "social engineering" taxes are better than others. For

Problem is what you suggest would violation any number of international laws, and wouldn't alter the drive to get the best investment but would simply encourage more ways to avoid paying the prohibitive taxation you would impose. More easy to implement would be tax rebates for investments made in America. Of course, even that would have international ramifications but at least you wouldn't be in direct violation of the laws and treaties.

> That seems better to me than giving tax breaks to Oil companies, as > there is danger in being dependent upon oil-supplying countries.

We already are, and have been for over 20 years.

> There > is a long history of giving breaks to companies that produce products > that we need for national security, and taxing products that give our > enemies strength.

Which is yet another reason to simply impose a flat income tax, with a single deductable of the federal poverty level.

Further, I might point out that it's not really taxes that has pushed business overseas, but the massive influx of federal rules, regulations, forms, documents, declarations, etc that have been imposed in recent years. The cost of those are far more than any minor difference in taxes, and it is that which pushes companies to relocated in order to avoid the headaches, expense and paperwork associated with complying with them.

Limiting the franchise to those who pay taxes would be a good first step. Then we can move towards those limiting it to those who paid more than they got in Government Benefits.

Look around, there still is disagreement, even with your basic statement below.

>For example;

>Is it fair to charge Mr A the rate of 32.6% income tax on his income but >charge Mr. B at a rate of 27.4% income tax on his income?

In that case there should be no personal deductions allowed, as that would change the % being taxed.

Most tax breaks though are in defining income. Obviously we want net income, not gross income, as different businesses have different types of expenses. The laws are very complex, often set up by people who have paid congressmen for laws that help them. Going to a flat tax won't change this.

>It's only when you engage in making class, race, ethnic, etc a factor that >what is "fair" becomes controlled by extraneous factors resulting from bias >and discrimination rather than any object view of what is "fair".

There are lots more criteria than those that people complain about.
One is whether an industry has enough clout to get laws written for it. And as always fairness is about perception.

"Speaking today on the Alex Jones Show, investigative journalist Jerome R. Corsi dropped a huge bombshell. Dr. Corsi provided proof that he was alerted to an on-going plot to release a fake more than two months before President Obama released his purported long-form birth certificate.

Corsi supplied Infowars.com with time-stamped Microsoft Word documents [.ZIP] of five unpublished World Net Daily investigative drafts, written between February 23 and February 24, 2011, two months before Obamaï¿½s April 27 birth certificate press conference. The unpublished reports confirm that moles inside the Hawaiian State government, including one inside the Department of Health, had warned Corsi of a plan by Obama operatives to plant and then publicly release a forged birth certificate.

The veteran investigative journalist released more details during a live appearance today, two hours and 8 minutes into the three hour broadcast."

The crimes have been exposed!

No, actually a billionaire tends to spend much more since they purchase considerably more goods and services, and thus pay more tax as a result.

> You're talking about tax on income, which the wealth class can affect > more than a burger flipper

Actually the wealthy would be affected more since the poverty level deduction is negligible for their income, but a significant part of the income of your burger flipper.

Let's say your burger flipper makes $30,000 and your "wealth class" makes $1,000,000

The burger flipper (given the numbers above, the ones you snipped) would be paying all of $900 in taxes. Your "wealth class on the other hand would be paying $146,400. The effective tax rate, and you love talking about effective rates, would have the effective tax rate on the burger flipper be 3%, your wealth class, on the other hand, would have an effective tax rate of 14.6%

So the tax is clearly affecting the wealth class far more than it would the burger flipper, so your objection has no merit.

In fact none of your objections have had any merit since your complaint seems to be that unless we stick to the wealthy then it's impossible.

So did I. Your low wage earner would have (after taxes) and increase in income of 13%, while the wealth class would have an increase in wealth of less than 1%.

Sure, the tax is more significant to the low wage earner, but the boost in income is also more significant as well.

You wish to ignore that half of the equation.

Why is that?

Greetings...

Have not posted here in ages... I gather there are still a few hams around/.

Anyone have any experience with both the IC-7410 and TS-590 ???

Trying to decide between the two. Also considered the FT-950 but it appears that both the IC-7410 and TS-590 are unanimously ranked above the FT-950.

Also considered the Ten-Tec Eagle and Jupiter, but I really prefer direct controls for a desktop rig.

Any advice would be appreciated.

Thanx !

Michael

How exactly do you determine what are "essential goods and services" never mind how much such "essential goods and services" a particular household requires?

Let's take an example.

A poor family is an old but well insulated house. High effeciency heating system. Pays $200 for heating.

Another poor family in a old, uninsulated and drafty house with an old heating system. Pays $450 for heating.

Do you effectively impose a tax on one poor family and/or pay the other for non-essential goods and services?

Because what would be essential for one family might be nothing more than a luxury for the other.

So, please define for me exactly how you determine the EXACT nature of essential goods and services for each household and exactly how much they spent on such goods and services.

> Second, per my example an item that costs $100 today

Hmmm... you impose a tax, and then state you're going to collect nothing in taxes....

Not necessarily. Look at some of the living expenses of the wealthy, or better yet those who were wealthy that no longer are.

Yep, you either put sales tax EVERYTHING equally, or the system is Already taken care of. If the poor guy buys a $400 dollar TV he has already paid the tax on the $400. If the rich guy buy a $4000 TV, he has already paid the taxes on the $4000.

It is only important that each of the dollars in the $400 has been taxed at a rate equal to those in the $4000.

Once again, I really don't care how it is implemented, it just has to work out to a final flat tax on all the money earned ... make a dollar, pay the tax on the dollar, make a hundred, pay the tax time a hundred, make a thousand pay the tax times a thousand ... scalable in either direction.

And, has been mentioned, no matter what system is finally chosen, crooks will ALWAYS attempt to escape paying their fair share ... as is happening with the rich elite today ...

A simple solution for a complicated problem...and it's wrong.

You need to equalize the BURDEN....You need to equalize the effect the tax has on the taxpayers life

I am not sure what you are referring to, as both the Eagle and Jupiter have direct controls; possibly you are confusing them with the Tentec Pegasus, which did require a computer to operate.

1) Both the Eagle and Jupiter are highly rated (see the reviews at eham.net)

2) Tentec supports their radios much longer than YaeComWood and their "Radio of the Month Club". Nothing sadder than YaeComWood telling you they no longer stock parts for a 2 or 3 year old radio.

3) Tentec is an American company, easy to contact, great support. Heck, they even give you a 30 day free trial (excluding shipping). The last I heard, YaeComWood does not do that.

4) IMHO, the receiver is -everything- and Sherwood Engineering rated the Eagle's receiver number 6 of all the receivers they have ever ranked. Not too bad for a mid-range radio.

Good luck with your decision and 73...

Dave : Threats Often Beget Threats, Posturing and Actions -result- Increased Hostilities.

? Have The Chinese Recently Threaten Us ?
Forcing Us [USA] Into Counter Threats,
Posturing and Actions ?

? Then Why Threaten The Chinese !
Forcing China [PRC] Into Counter Threats,
Posturing and Actions ?

Well, we are fully capable of intelligent design, so it will happen, at some time in the future.

However, so far, there is no evidence of anyone doing this, other than "the creator."

I cannot find a valid link showing what the 1% pay in actual money, actual dollars, and ACTUAL AMOUNT -- as compared to what the other 99% contribute, in a total amount.

We need the figures so that when we add what the 1% pay and what the 99% pay we will have the total amount of money, in dollars, paid to the government in income tax.

You text claims you have viewed these figures and know them.

Please post the credible links/URLs here so all of us may.

... else, it will appear you are just posting your personal opinion and guess(s.)

JS

I agree the level would need to be established, but changing how we fleece the taxpayer is certainly a worthy objective independent of anything else.

Indeed, I've come to the mind that allowing the government to impose taxes and to raise taxes was a mistake. The government should never have such a power, and any taxation or increase in taxation should only occur via public referendum. The only power the government should have is to eliminate taxes and/or lower rates.

We should be the ones telling the government what they have to spend, not the other way around.

True, and I would like to see a means by which government could earn what it needs, but off hand don't see a way to impose that today.

Bingo.

Something that IMO needs to be done on a regular basis anyway.

Indeed, I'm of the mind that most, if not all laws, should include an expiration date.

> One would have to stop viewing tax policy as a method of molding people's Yep, taxation as a means of social control is just plain wrong. Taxes are to raise revenue. Period. Not to control what people do, buy, use, etc.

Indeed, I've always thought the settlement against tobacco companies was wrong. Governments complained that tobacco use caused them extra medical expenses....but isn't that what the tax on tobacco they've been collecting was for?

Why did the tobacco companies get NO credit for all the taxes paid as a result of these product specific taxes?

Agreed, but until I see some serious spending cuts and a clear, firm (and preferably Constitutionally mandated) path to control spending and reduce the debt, I would be most reluctant to accept the need for any increase in taxation.

We've been promised spending cuts before in exchange for a tax hike. We got the hike....we didn't get the cuts.

And if he buys a $400 TV? He is now paying the same as your poor guy.

Then why are you and others whining about the rich not paying their

What happened to your dream of the rich guy paying a hundred times more tax than the little guy?

That is, basically, what my flat proposal is. You, however, have been ranting about making the rich pay a hundred times more than the poor guy or schemes which know whether you are in the top 1% or top 20% at the time you buy something.

Actually, I think if we fixed the income the federal government had to work with by eliminating their power to impose or increase taxes, I bet the rest would, over time, resolve itself. As law makers have to live within their means then priorities would be required and those items which were luxuries or not required would keep getting pushed further and further towards the short end of the stick. If we, as a people, decide that the government simply doesn't have the funds to provide the necessary services, then we, as a people, can decide to raise our taxes to provide more funding so such necessary services can exist at a level we desire.

We are, after all, the ones paying for it all, so we should have a direct say in how much we will pay.

Yep, and he neglicted to consider how the incomes would increase to cause that extra tax to be imposed.

Wage earner - 13% increase in net income
Wealth class - 0.3% increase in net income.

Sure the tax seems higher to the lower paid individual, but so does the increase in income.

Well the question does assume everything else to be equal, so clearly any deductions would need to be the same.

Sure it will, since with only one deduction there is nothing complex about the tax code, and nothing that can be done to help out such individuals or businesses to evade the tax owed.

thanx for the fast reply, joe... when i spoke of direct control i was speaking of multi function buttons for things like mode and band selection rather than computer control. fromt the front of the ten tec rigs, they appear to have multi function buttons for some basic things. though, i would not be in objection to a real SDR rig if they start making them for linux. the fact that the ten tec rigs are made in america is attractive, but icom's build quality is very good too. i have an r-75 and it has been flawless for many years. probably one of the best value for dollar purchases i have ever made.

Seems to me that the flat tax proposed would do that better than any other suggestion.

What do you propose?

Let me start by saying that I think that almost ALL post-9/11 travel regulations are BS, and in reality do little to nothing to stop terrorists (have they actually CAUGHT ANYONE before they got on the plane??)

That being said, the law applies equally to everyone. The Republic of Texas has no special privileges. I don't see that the TSA or DOJ are 'threatening' anyone, but pointing out the ramifications of the actions of the Texas legislature.

If you refuse to be searched/patted down/molested before boarding a plane, you don't get to board. If Texas were to pass this law, making the pat searches/molestations illegal, then nobody could board a plane, so why have the planes there at all?

We accept your admission that there is no evidence to support a claim that

Much as I would love to let you blame Reagan, it's not (necessarily) his fault.

It was the Nixon administration that caused the wholesale release of mental hospital patients. This was as a result of investigations into hospitals that were holding mental patients indefinitely without any sort of recourse and most of the time without any sort of re-evaluation of the patients.

Well, touching someone is illegal, why are the TSA molesters in jail?

If they have special privileges, why don't pedophiles just sue for the same privileges?

Everything about these actions are just plain WRONG!

You don't just go around searching citizens. Germany did, and they were the bad guys ... I don't know why it should be any different if we do it.

If you don't think the TSA will be filled with pedophiles, if not already, I think your logic is wrong ... one reason we don't allow these things -- at any cost.

Well, the release of political prisoners from nut-houses was/is good.
The release of rich old people, who are not dying fast enough, so their family can grab hold of their wealth was/is a good thing.

What reagan did was not ...

That 1% of the richest pay 42.7% of total taxes, and that 20% (that includes the first 1%) pay 50.3% of ALL TAXES ...

Again, what was originally said ... 50% of the roads, 50% of the public utilities, 50% of the cost of government, etc., etc.

that is to scale with the amount of financial wealth that they enjoy ...

They pay the aggregate of most of the money and it has far less impact on their lives than the ordinary working American.
To that extent it's unfair.

The progressive income tax, restored by removing the inequities that have been put there by the wealthy, would fix it.
Restoring the inheritance tax to eliminate the loop holes that have neutered it would help, too.

Neither the Bushes, the Harrimans, the Kennedys, nor the Rockefellers heirs got poor because of this tax.

Then remove the caps from the SS tax and the Medicare tax.....

Voila! No more fiscal problems!

Then cut the shit out of the military budget.

What does your acquisition have to do with OS/2, shortwave radio, amateur radio, or CB radio, DEFCON? KELP is a commercial AM/FM (that is, not shortwave, amateur, or CB) radio station in the El Paso, Texas, area.

That's where we seem to disagree most strongly. Defining what is a legitimate expense is not simple. That means defining taxable income is not simple.

Yea, you've said it, but somehow I missed seeing you ever prove they do not pay their fair share. Indeed I seem to recall a recent post from you bemoaning the fact you can't find any such proof.

I also missed seeing where you posted a list of the laws you claim they have violated.

Indeed, looks like all you have are empty, unsupported and repetitive claims against the "wealthy" which you seem unable to produce any support for.

Maybe you should start posting some cites for your claims rather than simply repeating them over and over as if repetition will somehow make them true.

Well, touching someone is illegal, why are the TSA molesters in jail?

If they have special privileges, why don't pedophiles just sue for the same privileges?

Everything about these actions are just plain WRONG!

Apparently you didn't notice the part where I agreed that these searches are wrong. However, the decision to allow them is based upon long precedence. There are many instances where your right to privacy is nullified and you must submit to pretty much any intrusion thereto. Most notably, of course, is a search at a jail or prison. Those go far beyond the TSA procedure in many instances. You are also subject to pat search and/or x-ray entering or leaving a military compound (this is not pushed as a rule, but it IS there as an option!) or US Embassy.

As it stands, the TSA procedures are law, whether we like it or not. As citizens and members of a larger society, it is upon us to obey the law until such time as it can be overturned by the courts or by congressional action. If the SCOTUS doesn't overturn it in the future, it is incumbent upon us as citizens to petition our senators and representatives to reverse it. Lacking that, we must elect senators and representatives that WILL.

Sorry, but it's your claim they are not paying their fair share, it's up to YOU to support that claim.

So, no, I'm not doing your homework for you. You want to claim they aren't paying their fair share, then it's up to you to prove that.

What have you offered to back up your personal opinions and rants?

I will simply note that even in this thread, he has posted more evidence to support his opinion than you have yours.

Well, SOB, you mean there's actually an advantage to getting ahead?

If there wasn't, then why would people work their asses off to do so?

Looks to me like you're simply pissed because you're poor and they're not.

What does "legitimate expense" have to do with anything?

Are you suggesting we have more than one deduction?

Doesn't that simply impose the complexity you claim we need to avoid, and allow loopholes and special 'favors' that you claim we need to eliminate?

> That means defining taxable income
> is not simple.

Actually it's very simple. Any income above the poverty level is taxable income.

No legitimate expenses, not excepts, no exclusions, no other deductions. You make X dollars above the poverty level then all 100% of $X is taxable. You are allowed ONE, and only ONE, deduction. The first $(poverty level) is deducted from your taxable income.

I don't understand why you are attempting to make something so simple into something complex.

You could not excess my link or are you ashamed to post your score? I think my IQ is higher than your bowling score! Even if it was a

So a tax that would only apply to a fairly narrow segment of the public is equal?

Oh and by the way, luxury taxes are most felt by the middle class who actually make the luxury items. And then the rich just keep on doing what they do. Ask John Kerry, who BTW was in Vietnam, you know.

Check the status of American boat builders. If you can find one. Who do you think suffered? The middle class artisans. Brilliant.
